JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Disappearing Budget Deficit May Reach $30 Billion; Here's Report on Nixon's Hush-Hush GOP Conference; Senators Want Nixon To Nudge Agnew On Fillibuster.

Environmental Proposals Seek New Pollution Controls, Levies

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon sent Congress today his environmental proposals for 1971, including brand new programs to control noise, ocean dumping, and the industrial and commercial use of toxic substances.

The President also proposed to tax the use of lead in gasoline and to levy a charge on the airpolluting sulphur content of energy fuels, a measure whose greatest impact would be on the cost

As promised earlier, Nixon called for adoption by Congress of a national land use policy, which would lean heavily on the authority of state governments to regulate critical uses of their land.

The package also repeated Nixon's call, contained a week ago in his budget proposals for fiscal 1972, to increase federal aid forconstruction of waste treatment facilities to a level of $2 billion per year over the next three years.

But the President's proposals would also give the new Environmental Protection Agency a stronger hand in enforring water quality standards by allowing it to impose administrat ve fines up to $25,000.

And it would permit citizen suits against water polluters, such as were authorized against air polluters in the 1970 Air Quality Act.

As announced previously, the President sought authority to place limitations upon industrial and municipal waste discharges into virtually all United States waters, including ground water.

In all, said Russell E. Train, chairman of the President's Council on Environmental Quality, the program would require passage of about 14 pieces of legislation.

Train told newsmen the bills would be sentto Congress within a few days, perhaps on Wednesday.

Sunday Sales Act Repeal to Be Sought

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — House and Senate committees will be considering a batch of legislation this week, including a dozen or more of major interest.

One of the most controversial is expected to be repeal of the Sunday Sales Act, the 1963 law that was enacted hurriedly after the Missouri Supreme Court reversed itself and held the ancient "Blue Laws" were unenforceable.

In December 1961, the supreme court said the Blue Laws that barred most any Sunday action were still constitutional and enforceable. But 16 months later the court, after another close look, rejected the laws as unenforceable.

So the legislature drafted a new law, still on the books, permitting Sunday sales of food, drugs and souvenirs, but barring sales of automobiles, plumbing supplies, baby bottles, hardware or clothing.

Since then there have been spotty violations, liberal unenforcement and only a few cases of vigorous enforcement.

The Senate Municipal Corporations Committee will be hearing only the proponents of the repeal bill Wednesday afternoon with opponents to be given their chance at a later date.

Other issues that will be under scrutiny by either House or Senate committees this week would:

Boost workmen's compensation benefits.

Let automobile dealers or their agents collect auto and driver license fees.

Extend the merit system to all state employes.

Authorize local county or municipal officials to act in cases of civil emergency, either riot, man-made or natural disaster.

Guns Recovered Following Arrest

NEW MADRID——Guns reported stolen in Arkansas were recovered Saturday following the arrest Friday night of Richard Miller Jr., 22, Catron, and Isaac Woods, 20, Elgin, Ill., on traffic charges by State Trooper Carroll Plunkett and Lilbourn Marshal Johnnie Barnes.

The pair was brought to the sheriff's office where information has been received on the gun theft.

Deputy Sheriff Flip Dees reported a search Saturday by Deputy Shorty Price, Plunkett, Barnes, Parma Marshal Doc Lindley, and Risco Marshal Alfred Scott led to the recovery of a 308 rifle, 30 carbine, and .22 rifle, reported stolen from a pawn shop in Blytheville, and two pistols, which had been obtained by trading the stolen rifles.

Miller and Woods waived extradition and were returned to Arkansas today. A third suspect, Robert Lee Woods, is being sought in Elgin.

LAOS, new target of South Vietnam and United States.

Strike in Laos Called Limited

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States declared today that the South Vietnamese-U.S. strike against Communist bases in Laos will be limited in "time and area" and will protect American lives in the course of further trool withdrawals.

"This limited operation is not an enlargement of the war," the State Department said in a policy statement.

Press officer Robert J. McCloskey said his understanding is that the operation in which the United States is supplying air support for thousands of South Vietnamese troops, will be limited to the area between the 16th and 17th parallel. That would keep it within the southern Laos panhandle and the region of the Communist supply center of Sepone.

McCloskey declined to define the time limitation. Under questioning he said that the limits determined by South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu would apply to U.S. air support also.

President Nixon made the basic decision on striking at the North Vietnamese sanctuaries recently, McCloskey said. He declined to be more specific.

The eight-point statement on U.S. policy promised an announcement by President Nixon in April on further withdrawals of U.S. forces, linking this to the Lao operation.

It also sought to meet any charges that the operation conflicts with the Cooper-Church restriction on U.S. operations in Indochina by saying that the new move "is consistent with statutory requirements."

As the Defense Department had done Sunday night, the comprehensive policy statement today pledged that no American ground combat forces or advisers would cross into Laos.

It repeated the South Vietnamese government's definition of the objective of the operations as being to destroy supplies and forces concentrated in Laos by the North Vietnamese.

"The operation will promote the security and safety of American and allied forces in South Vietnam," the statement said, "and is consistent with statutory requirements.

"It will make the enemy less able to mount offenses and (will) strengthen South Vietnam's ability to defend itself as U.S. forces are withdrawn from South Vietnam. It will protect American lives."

12 Left Homeless By Portageville Fire

PORTAGEVILLE——Two families including eight children were left homeless following a fire at 2 a.m. Sunday east of the Bay.

The fire originated at the home of Peter Johnson, who was smoking meat in a smoke house on the side of the home. The fire quickly spread to the home of Jim Frank Jennings.

Both homes were destroyed and both families lost all their furnishings and clothes.

Portageville Fire Chief Jitney Foster said "there was no chance to save the homes." The firemen prevented a third home from burning.

Foster reported Peter Johnson was rescued from the flaming dwelling by Roosevelt Hues, who dragged Johnson out of the house when the walls began falling.

Foster said an appeal is being made for clothes for the Jennings children, ranging in age from two to 12 and household furnishings for both families.

Persons having items may leave them at Jitney's Market Basket.

Cable Television Here

Cable television is coming to Sikeston in late April according to Travis Garrett, general manager of See—mor Cable Television. He said this morning that residents of Sikeston, Miner and a few nearby residents would begin receiving service then.

Construction was delayed for nearly a year because of Federal Communications Commission approval. Support wiring and cables are now being laid.

Garrett said that 70 per cent of Sikeston now has support wiring and 40 per cent has cables.

CATV will offer network affiliated channels 3,6, and 12, and ultra-high frequency channels 21 from Murray and 29 from Paducah. Educational television channel 8 from Carbondale, Ill., will also be available.

Officials from channel 29 said last week that movies will predominate in its programing.

See—Mor also will provide a 24—hour channel providing around the clock weather information and background music.

A 15—section, 300—foot receiving tower will be erected by the end of this week. The tower is two miles north of Sikeston near Tanner Road.

Garrett said that two channels, possibly 9 and 10, are being left available for the use of schools and Sikeston programming.

When all the cable is laid, it will be spliced to above ground support wire and turned on.

Twitty Has Built Strong School With Good Community Support

By JUDY GAZETTE

Chatting with Lynn Twitty was fascinating. Efforts toward reporting his personality and experiences proved to be a day's work.

Superintendent of Sikeston public schools since 1951, Twitty will retire in April and he says, "so some other things." Taking over the job will be Sam Harbin, director of secondary education. Twitty is 61.

From an office chair, Twitty settled in and directed his attention — if hesitantly — to answering questions.

He was born in Washington, Ind., Feb. 17, 1909, the oldest of seven children. They were reared on a farm in a "liberal atmosphere...conducive to learning," as he described it. His father, James Dwight Twitty, a farmer, completed high school, and he recalled, "was a very sensitive person. If we had extra money, he encouraged us to spend it on books instead of candy. My mother was the realistic one in the family — the dominant personality."

By the time he started to school, the family moved to Kewanee and from there to Lilbourn, where he graduated from high school in 1928. He was active in athletics, playing center on the varsity football team. Asked about his high school days, he remarked: "I was fairly good in literature and history....the humanities, but as a math student, I was terrible. I did read a lot, and still do, but to this day, I have no aptitude for mathematics."

In 1934, he earned a bachelor of science degree in social studies and physical education, with a minor in fine arts from Southeast Missouri state college in Cape Girardeau — taking advantage of a football scholarship. He was, admittedly, a politician — elected president of his senior class and captain of the college football team, positions that he held in high school as well.

Later in 1934, as college sweethearts will, Twitty and Miriam Frances Jones of Campbell, married. Making the most of that year, his teaching career began, also — as basketball coach at Kewanee.

"I made so many mistakes during that first term, I could write a book on negative approaches." Twitty laughed. I asked what kind of mistakes. "In discipline.... or motivation. For instance, you can't ridicule a child into learning."

In 1937 he launched into educational administration by taking on responsibilities as principal then as superintendent at Kewanee. By 1942, he had been superintendent at Lilbourn three years and had completed work on a masters degree in educational administration from the University of Missouri at Columbia.

As an enlisted private —on military leave-of-absence from Lilbourn schools — he trained at Quantico, Va., served in the Pacific during World War II and was a staff member of the Marine's school at Quantico. After the war, he returned to Lilbourn with the rank of major, served as superintendent until 1951, and went back into active duty during the Korean conflict. It was not suprising that he completed 29 years reserve activity in 1969 and holds a commission as colonel, retired.

Astronauts Hard to Awaken As Apollo Travels Earthward

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)— Apollo 14 and its cargo of moon treasure plummeted past the halfway mark of its homeward journey today, streaking faster and faster toward a Tuesday splashdown in the Pacific OCEAN.

Alan B. Shepard Jr., Edgar D. Mitchell and Stuart A. Roosa reluctantly awakened after a 10 hour rest, which followed a Sunday night telecast in which they expressed hope the space program might help achieve peace and understanding on earth.

Mission Control said it had considered letting them sleep later because they had only a light schedule on their last full day in space: monitoring systems, making stellar navigation readings and resting for the busy re-entry Tuesday.

"We thought we'd let you keep banker's hours today," capsule communicator Fred W. Haise told Mitchell when he sent the wakeup alarm. "But we can't let you sleep in tomorrow, so we thought we'd get you back on schedule."

Mitchell reported he had to do a little extra shaking to "wake up these other two guys."

While the astronauts slept, their command ship Kitty Hawk zipped past the halfway point of the 238,000 mile trip froo moon to earth and was picking up speed as earth's gravity exerted an ever greater inflaence.

Interest Wanes in Landings

By CHARLES BRADY

Going to the moon is a remarkable achievement for mankind but many Sikestonians don't have the interest in lunar landings and moonwalks they once had.

Telephone calls to homes throughout the city over the weekend disclosed that many residents were not very interested in the space exploration.

Of 50 citizens called in a random survey, only three said they arose at 3 a.m. Friday to view the lunar module Antares settle in the Fra Mauro region of the moon. There was none of the mass marathon viewing of Appollo 14 that accompanied Apollo 11 July 20, 1969 when Neil Armstrong became the first human to walk on the moon.

Although many Sikeston offices, stores, and schools had television sets operating to allow employes, customers, and pupils to watch the drama of the fifth and sixth humans, all Americans to set foot on the alien world, home viewers were noticeably absent.

Only six citizens said they were glued to their television sets.

Ten residents said they had watched some of the moon drama but "weren't very interested" in it because it was "old stuff".

Seven residents admitted they had not watched any of the moon mission and 27 said they had watched it part of the time.

Four residents mentioned that they weren't interested in it at first but "became concerned" and started watching the drama when the lunar module Antares and the command module Kitty Hawk had trouble docking.

"I think they (spacemen) could find something more interesting to do than that (walk on the moon)" one citizen complained. "We need more money here at home instead of spending it for space flights."

Another noted "perhaps they should wait for longer periods of time between moon shots".

"It doesn't matter to me how many times we go to the moon. It's a fantastic thing and kind of makes me proud to be an American," one resident offered.

The general consensus was shown in this remark:

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

No advertising pays a better return than wedding invitations.

* * *

HOW TO MAKE A MONSTER

Charles Manson and three of his "hippie" followers have been found guilty of first degree murder in the bloody slaughter of seven hapless victims, one of whom was actress Sharon Tate. Thus, "justice has been done" — but the dead can not be brought back, nor can they be spared the horror of their demise. Hopefully, the conviction will deter other would-be criminals. But there is still the nagging question: "Why?" The parents of Sharon Tate - who lost not only a daughter but an unborn grandchild as well - said, at the end of the long trial, thay they were still haunted by the question, "How could anybody do such a terrible thing?"

Theories abound. It was widely reported that Manson "went bad" because he was "cruelly deprived" as a child. But an enterprising reporter, Dave Smith of the Los Angeles Times, found and interviewed the mother of Manson, who, under another name, lives virtually in hiding. And according to her, Manson was a pampered child who got his way in nearly everything. "If Charles wanted anything, I'd give it to him," she told Smith.

True, Manson had been born out of wedlock. True, he had not seen his father after he was four years old. But he was surrounded by an overindulgent family, including his mother, her sister, (his aunt), his uncle and his grandmother.

"If Charles wanted money to go to the pictures, he'd come and get it from me, and then he'd get it from his grandmother and my sister, too." Mrs. Manson told Smith. "He never had to do a thing to earn what he wanted. He didn't even have to to things around the house, like rake leaves or mow lawns ... Until Charles came out to California when he was about 21, he never worked a whole day in his life."

It's an old saying that the Devil finds work for idle hands to do. Hannah More, the great 18th century English writer and philanthropist, wrote that "Idleness among children, as among men, is the root of all evil." There is ample evidence that these wise words of yesterday, scorned by many today, contained far more truth than fiction.

REPUBLIC REPULSED

I tell you this day the Republic has been repulsed. Our laws have been rendered ineffective, our Christian heritage assailed, our educational system corrupted, our patriotism diluted by ridicule and all segments of our society must share some of the blame . . .

It is my opinion that some members of the judicial system have condoned the rape of liberty for the gratification of the individual. That the scales of justice have been tipped by the decisions adjudicating the law in a manner which they would like to see it — instead of what it is.

I firmly believe that society has rights and that individual liberty is secondary to the whole, where there has been due process.

I would remind all that no indiviudal freedom can last except in an orderly society. Can we hope to be freer or more secure in the pursuit of happiness by limiting police powers because of a supposed fear of abuse — while at the same time we are in a greater danger from those criminals that have increased crime nine times faster than the growth of our population — and still others who commit fraud, violence and murder in the name of individual liberty or their sociological beliefs?

We will lose this Republic by the weight of numbers of crimes that go unsolved. The numbers of thefts, rapes, robberies, and frauds untied because we have not provided enough trained police to investigate and apprehend — enough prosecutors to try the cases — enough courts to hear them and, most serious of all, enough citizens who will serve as witnesses or jurors and take up the responsibility of citizenship.

There is no order in a society that permits one citizen to perpetrate crimes against another in the guise of liberty. Nor does law exist where threats, intimidation and assault by person against person is condoned.

The world today changes in seconds instead of centuries. A society that does not progress to insure equality of protection for all its citizens in each facet of its growth condemns itself to destruction.

In order to insure that degree of security each of us would garner unto himself and his posterity, those unto himself and his posterity, those charged to enforce the laws must be so equipped as to capably meet all assaults upon America.

America is under the greatest attack today that she has known in a century. Greater from within, perhaps, than from without . . .

Things are going to get much worse before they get much better unless there is a fast and firm action taken to change thinking today.

This thin blue line — this thin blue line of policemen is all that holds this country together and they are wavering from the assault on the one side and the lack of support on the other. If this line ever breaks this country will be so irretrievably lost that no army will ever restore the freedoms that we now have.

The leftists now say they intend to overthrow our government. They have resorted to violence. They are arming and they are moving from the college campuses to the high schools and grade schools.

There is now an assault to break the ranks of labor via the "work-in" program. Labor says they won't make it. But author Phillip A. Luce says that the United Auto Workers funds have, for years, been used to finance SDS activities.

We know that the use of drugs, sex, alcohol and guilt are being used to enlist the youth of this nation to their cause. If you question this let me tell you that drug offenses have gone up 400 per cent over the last year and that more illegal liquor is being drunk today than during prohibition.

They hook young girls on dope and then prostitute them to get money to fund their campaigns.

Other groups are blackmailing cities for money. They say "give or we march, burn and destroy!"

Governmental programs and funds have been used to finance individuals and whatever causes they are interested in.

They charge police with brutality and, yet, policemen are constantly being assaulted. They are attempting in every way they know how to destroy the police image. They have to in order to achieve their purpose because the police represent law and they cannot operate within the law.

You are not afraid to walk down the street because of police brutality. But why do they want you to think this way? It is Communist propaganda to destroy America.

We have college professors who are teaching un-Americanism in our colleges. We know some who have aided and abetted the leftists by furnishing them advice on how to circumvent the law. They have also furnished money and transportation.

We see some of the same faces showing up at one demonstration after another and yet we hear the riots are spontaneous. We can prove they are not.

We find the bank accounts of student leaders swelled by large cash deposits which cannot be traced.

We have found caches of arms and explosives in large quantities.

Now we have SDS members graduating from colleges and teaching these theories to our first graders.

We have governmental officials and university administrators who are appeasing dissenters and political leaders lending support to radicals.

The irresponsible people of government make such statements as "Elect my candidate and there won't be any police brutality. There won't be any police!"

MEASLES - MUMPS -RUBELLA VACCINE COMBINATION CALLED SUCCESS

Washington, D.C. — In field trials with a combined live virus vaccine against measles, mumps and rubella, protective antibodies were induced against one or more of the three diseases with a single injection in more than 93 per cent of the subjects, it was reported here.

The experimental vaccine was administered in four studies to 715 preschool age children who were previously without antibodies to any of the three viruses.

There was no evident impairment of immune response resulting from interaction of the viruses, Maurice R. Hilleman, Ph.D., of the Merck Institute for Therapeutic Research, West Point, Pennsylvania, told an International Conference on the Application of Vaccines Against Viral Rickettsial, and Bacterial Disease of Man, sponsored jointly by the Pan American Health Organization and the World Health Organization.

The clinical studies with the combined vaccine, which Dr. Hilleman developed with Eugene B. Buynak, Ph. D., also of Merck, were carried out in collaboration with Drs. Joseph Stokes, Jr., and Robert E. Weibel, both of the Universtiy of Pennsylvania, and Drs. Victor M. Villarejos, Jorge A. Arguedas - Gamboa and Gilberto Vargas, all of the International Center for Medical Research and Training, Louisiana State University, San Jose, Costa Rica.

According to Dr. Hilleman, the mild fevers occasionally observed following the administration of the three -in -one vaccine were no greater than when measles vaccine was administered alone.

Of the 715 children in the studies, 684 (95.7 per cent) developed antibodies against measles, 680 (95.1 per cent) against mumps, and 670 (93.7 per cent) against rubella.

The combined vaccine, Dr. Hilleman explained, consists of the Jeryl Lynn strain mumps vaccine, the Moraten (more attenuated) measles strain, and the HPV-77 rubella virus strain prepared in duck embryo tissue. All three are in use separately.

Dr. Hilleman also reported favorable results with other vaccine combinations, including single - injection vaccines against mumps - rubella, measles - rubella, and measles - smallpox. He said findings to date have demonstrated the feasibility and utility of the combined - vaccine approach for routine application.

In addition to speeding up public health immunization programs in the United States, he observed that combined vaccines would be of particular value in the developing nations, where acute shortages of medical personnel exist.

A BRIGHT FUTURE BEGAN IN A CAB

Dick Osk, an editor with Sales Management Magazine, asked Bob Ix, the president of Schweppes, for an interview. Ix promised to pick him up at the railroad station in Stamford, Conn. The train was 12 minutes late and when the editor arrived he found Ix's car but no president.

A few minutes later, Ix emerged from a nearby liquor store. He said, "When they told me that the train would be late, I called on the liquor dealer across the street and sold him an order for our new mixes."

This was quite typical. When he was an undergraduate at the Universtiy of Pennsylvania, Bob Ix learned that a VP from Arthur D. Little, Inc., was coming fr m Cambridge, Miass., to interview prospective graduates. Ix, a Marketing major, wanted a job with the management consulting firm and tried to get an appointment but was told that only graduating engineers were being interviewed.

Sales Management continues: Focusing on the opportunity rather than the problem, as is his wont, Ix figured a way to get his interview. At 5:30 p.m. when Coveney finally emerged from his engineer interviews and was hurrying out of the building, Ix approached him.

Ix reports, "Coveny said he was sorry that he couldn't talk, that he had to find a cab and rush to the airport. It's tough to get a cab in Philadelphia at that hour so I had one waiting for him. He interviewed me on the way to the plane and by the time he boarded it, I had an invitation to Cambridge." (He got the job.)

LEADED GASOLINE FIGHTS ITS CRITICS

The automobile industry is urging the petroleum industry to get the lead out — literatlly — to help clean up the nati n's air. The lead is tetraethyl lead, which has been used in gasoline since its antiknock qualities were discovered by chemist Thomas Midgley Jr. in 1921.

The petroleum people say they will be happy to supply unleaded gasoline anytime Detroit mass - produces engines that can use it. The automakers say they will start building the engines as soon as the oil men give them the specifications of the fuel.

Now a third interested party has gotten into the act.

J.L.KImberley, executive vice president of the Lead Industries Association, claims that no studies have shown any health hazard to the public from the lead in gasoline. Not only that, we don't know what health hazards might result from widespread use of unleaded gasoline, he says.

He cites a recent U.S. Department of Interior research report which found that pollution effects increased by as much as 25 per cent when gasoline was changed from leaded to unleaded, even though total emissions were about the same.

Better, he says, to concentrate on perfecting emission -control devices that will reduce auto exhaust pollution particles of all kinds, including lead.

However, the reason the automakers would like to see lead go is because it ahs a corrosive effect on new antipolluton devices, such as catalytic mufflers.

Tetraethyl lead, or its chemical companion tetramethyl laed, are added to about 97 out of every 100 gallons of gasoline produced. It takes only about one teaspoon per gallon

Without the use of antiknocks, at least 11 gallons of gasoline would be required to do the work of 10 gallons of unleaded fuel. This translates into a saving of almost 200 million barrels of crude oil a year in the United States alone.

It is estimated that the more complex refining processes needed to produce an efficient, high - octane, lead - free gas would raise the price of gasoline several cents a gallon. Also, modification of older cars to use the new fuel would be costly to the individual car owner.

"So What's Your Rush?"

Nevertheless, the lead -must -go bandwagon is gathering momentum, but whether it will take us all to a happy destination is something less than certain.

It figures, what with all we've been hearing abot the movie industry falling onto lean times.

TOO MANY TRUCKS IN THAILAND

Examples of misspent and misused foreign aid never seem to end. Senator Stuart Symington now has found that large numbers of trucks, trailers and tractors, supplied by the United States to Thailand, are sitting in open fields "engulfed in weeds."

Ammunition, also sent by our country, is being stored in the open without protection or security.

This came to light after the General Accounting Office (GAO) looked into the $260 million in aid the United States has given Thailand.

It found, among other things, that the United States had been sending equipment and vehicles to equip a Thai division under the assumption it was the same size as an American division. But in reality a Thai division has less than half the number of men of a United States division.

Meanwhile all those extra trucks, tractors and trailers are decorating the Thai landscape.

H.L. Hunt Says

FOREIGN "AID" HURTS RECIPIENT, TOO

Concerned citizens enthusiastic for the Constructive viewpoint in international affairs have long maintained that so-called economic aid to backward nations, paid for by U.S. taxpayers through various U.S. and international agencies, actually hurt almost everybody and helped very few. Capital investment in suitable enterprises is what all developing economies need, not "welfare" from U.S. taxpayers. India provides a prime example.

This view is beginning to take hold in Congress, too, now that enough voters back home have heeded the advice of seasoned campaigners for the Truth-side and started writing to influence their Senators and Representatives through effective means such as the letters-to-the-editor columns in their weekly and daily newspaper and other periodicals.

Pressure from voters has begun to make some liberals take a better look at the facts of economic "aid" and actually see the blunders which Constructive observers have been citing all along. Not only does the government "aid" wind up too often in the wrong hands among bureaucrats and political party leaders, usually socialistic at that, in the developing nation, the "aid" more often than not prevents the local citizens from solving their problem.

Needed reform never is completed so long as Uncle Sam will pick up the bill for the silly socialistic blunders and the backward nation falls farther behind, instead of building and investing and creating to solve its problems. A study of the harm U.S. aid has done to India should provide needed lessons when the new foreign aid bills come up in Congress. HLH

TERROR HITS TEACHERS: Blood Flows As Extremists' Flying Squads Slug Way Towards Control of Education.

Newark, N. J.: — First it must be said there is far more to this story than cracked skulls, blood on the concrete paths of this asphalt jungle, school teachers now bruised from a swift beating, a pervasive gnawing fright, a burned-out car, and an eroding community spirit of men who did believe they could revive this rotting, racket-ridden city.

The bare facts are that a paramilitary band of young black men, some 19, others older, some 25 years of age, surrounded and kicked, clubbed and struck 15 school teachers at about 7:30 a.m., Feb. 2. Sticks, brass knuckles and even a fire extinguisher were used before the slick hit ended and the attackers sped off on foot and in cars.

There you have the bare bones of "the incident." But the story is far more significant than a "hit" on some striking members of the Newark Teachers Union.

There were black as well as white instructors in the assaulted group. All of them belong to a 4,000-member union which runs from 60 to 70 per cent black. Practically all of their union leadership is black. Some of them are of the New Left. You couldn't really get into an argument over Stalin or Mao in the union's hierarchy. They are militant.

This strike followed an earlier one during which their national leader, Dave Selden, president of the American Federation of Teachers, came to their aid and went to prison for 45 days for his efforts. Mr. Seldon is white.

The city's Board of Education is almost as militant. One of the militants' heroes is playwright, author, LeRoi Jones. There is no doubt of the board members' devotion to the black cause. You can see it in some of their salutes. Mr. Jones has been greeted by clenched fist across the heart and straight-arm, palm upstretched salutes.

This city's mayor, Kenneth Gibson, appears to be the best-known of black leaders. He, too, is close to LeRoi Jones, a very devout chap these days, known sometimes as Imamu (in Swahili, the Spiritual Leader) or as Ameer Baraka, an adopted Arabic name.

So the issue is not racial. The issue is jobs. And control of the education of tens of thousands of children. And community control.

The young men who moved in quick formation, slugging women as well as men brutally with laughing disdain for all in the group of teachers who merely were standing around rapping, deliberately adopted a military mien. They wore dungaarees and army fatigue jackets.

There are other such squads. Some are known as the enforcers. They move quickly. They make a profession of frightening folks. They operate at mass meetings. They want a piece of the action. And they get it.

Yet the famed Mayor Gibson, who defeated one of the sleaziest band of men ever to rule any city, has not been very vocal. That's an understatement. He has been silent and this has angered the teachers union national leaders.

"I think it is lamentable," says Dave Selden, "that the mayor of Newark did not offer one word of condemnation in this attack. Nor have we heard much from his police department. We have offered a $5,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the brutal assailants. But the mayor is silent. Why?

Mr. Selden avers that "black extemists" want to drive out the union and seize control of the city's educational system. Mr. Selden says the friction is the result of "the kind of incitement which Gibson, Jones and others have been engaging in ..."

There is no apparent link between the paramilitary squad which roughed up the teachers and LeRoi Jones' Black Community Development and Defense Organization. This has been described as "composed of approximately 100 men including an elite military-like corps called the Simbas and 50 women 'dedicated to the creation of a new value system for the Afro-American Community'."

Most national teachers union leaders, along with Mr. Selden, see writer Jones as "gung-ho" over dominating the educational system. Mr. Jones is the dominant personality in an umbrella organization called the Committee For a Unified Newark, at 502 High Street here. In it are such units as the United Brothers of Newark. They all are deep in the educational system -- from the Board of Education on down to some local schools.

Mr. Selden believes Mr. Jones and friends want to drive the teachers union out of town and out of business. If true, there will be an awful grinding noise. Of course, aid will come from across the river where the United Federation of Teachers is 70,000 strong under the leadership of Al Shanker, a veteran at 40 years of many such battles.

Since the issue appears to be the dumping of the union, the rest of the labor movement is flexing some muscle. And in New Jersey they have it -- all the way from the Teamsters Joint Council to the building trades and the United Auto Workers.

It would be a pity -- and pitiful -- if there is no resort to reason. Paramilitarism, flying squads, weird salutes have nothing to do with self-determination. They are the result of confused permissiveness.

Slugging women isn't self expresson. It's a power grab. If it becomes a way of life -- by any other name -- it will exploit those desperately seeking a better life.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON--President Nixon has been doing some tall talking to sell his razzle-dazzle budget, with its now-yo-see--it--now-you-don't $11.6 billion deficit, to Republican conservatives.

Down through the long years of Democratic spending, they have howled for a blanced budget. Now their own President is asking them to support a "full-employment budget" with a whopping deficit written in disappearing red ink.

The deficit is supposed to disappear, that is, if there is full employment. But the only way to achieve full employment, he explained, is to start spending money as if full employment were already here. To skeptical conservatives, this sounds like the kind of Democratic double-talk they have doubted in the past.

Only a year ago, President Nixon told the nation: "We must balance our federal budget so that American families will have a better chance to balance their family budgets." Yet his 1971-72 budget, unless there is a dramatic opening up of jobs, will wind up with a massive, $30,2 billion deficit.

The President called Republican congressional leaders into the backrooms of the White House to explain his new deficit-spending philosophy. The discussion was meant for GOP ears only. However, we can report the highlights.

"We cannot get full employment without an expansionary budget," insisted the President. He said his aim was "to have a prosperous economy with full employment."

NIXON QUESTIONED

Colorado's Peter Dominick, the new Senate Republican campaign chairman , asked how they should answer businessmen who complain about inflation and interest rates.

The President noted that interest rates are going down and suggested that his expansionary budget would help. "What really matters is what happens, he said. "Does it work? We believe it will."

His budget manager, George Shultz, chimed in: "if the economy goes up, so do their profits."

Michigan's Robert Griffin, the assistant Senate GOP leader, congratulated the President for speaking out against the recent steel price increase. "What you said to steel was very helpful," said Griffin.

"With oil as well," replied Nixon, "we had to state our views. We didn't bullrag anybody, but we were firm."

"Unemployment will come down," Shultz added confidently. But most economists expect unemployment, now at the highest level in nine years, to rise still higher before it starts to decline.

Later, the President sent Shultz up to Capitol Hill to give all Republican Senators a budget briefing behind closed doors.He ran into a buzzsaw of questiong from such crusty conservatives as Colorado's Sen. Gordon Allott, Delaware's Sen. Galeb Boggs, Nebraska's Sen. Carl Curtis, and Arizona's Sen. Paul Fannin. Essentially, they wanted to know how they could justify a huge deficit after preaching a balanced budget for years.

WASHINGTON WHIRL

FILIBUSTER FLAP--Senate Republican leaders are seeking delicately to get the President to speak to the Vice President about the Senate filibuster. President Nixon has indicated privately that he favors changing the Sentate rules to make it easier to shut off filibusters. At the end of the last session, he told Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield amiably at a White House meeting: "Your performance sure looks like you need a change in rules up there, Mike." But the word has leaked out of Vice President Agnew's office that he opposes a rules change. He has declined, meanwhile, to tell Senate GOP leaders how he would rule in the filibuster controversy. They, therefore, have quietly asked White House aides to get the President to speak to Agnew.

SNOW JOB--William "Fishbait" Miller, the official House doorkeeper, is a dedicated fellow who does more than guard the door. For years, Fishbait has stood while the Speaker and Majority Leader held their daily five-minute news conference before the House convenes at noon. When the noon hour arrives and the two leaders head for the House floor, there is always a brief ceremonial pause while Fishbait brushes the dandruff off their shoulders. "He has been doing that for years," said one House official. "It's not so bad with Carl Albert and Hale Boggs. But when (John) McCormack was Speaker, Fishbait had to use both hands to remove all the dandruff."

USEFUL POLLUTION--William Ruckelshaus, the Nixon Administration's chief environmentalist, has been quickly urging industry to find a way to turn pollution into constructive use. He has pointed out, for example, that sewage can be diverted to farm land to nourish the soil. The U.S., with only 5 per cent of the world's population, uses 30 per cent of the world's resources and produces 50 percent of the world's pollution. Ruckelshaus is calling upon the great corporations to help solve the problems. He has asked them to study how industrial emissions, which now befoul the air and water, might somehow be channeled and used to benefit mankind.

You are more likely to get a cold if you work in an office than a factory. The average worker loses froo three to four days a year because of colds. Only six per cent escape at least one attack of the sniffles durinv that period.

Venetian noblemen once vied so hard to see which could make the trappings of his gondolas the most magnificent and colorful that in 1562 a derree was issued: "Henceforth one color for all." That is why to this day the picturesque water craft that ply the canals of Venice are all painted a somber black.

You wouldn't think any patriotic American would litter a historic site such as the Washington Monument, would you? But workmen who clean it d aily sweep up about 40 gallons of debris, most of it thrown away by tourists.

The chances are that you'll take 1.7 trips away from home this year, and nine to one that you'll go by car. About 77 per cent of travelers go by car, and 63 per cent of them journey at least 199 miles from home, and 47 per cent spend from two to five nights away.

Quotable notables: "Any fool can tell the truth, but it requires a man of some sense to lie well."

The Stronger Sex: Older women seem to have a greater desire for independence and freedom than older men. At least three times as many women live alone or with nonrelatives as do older men.

The Good Old Days: Inflation has always been with us. For example, there was widespread indignation and predictions of financial disaster when some barber shops--or tonsorial salons, as they were called--raised the price of standard nickel shave to six cents and upped the dime haircut to 12 cents. That was in 1860.

Sobering statistic: Alcohol is now regarded by medical authorities as either the third or fourth chief killer in our society. They attribute more deaths only to heart disease, cancer, and perhaps strokes. For years many experts have though it to be a factor in half the nation's fatal highway accidents.

It was John Dewey who observed, "A man who prides himself upon acting upon principle is likely to be a man who insists upon having his own way without learning from experience what is the better way."

Bits and pieces

SALINA, Kan. (AP) — The fire department reports that Mrs. Virginia Fakes was looking for something under her bed with a candle.

The box springs burst into flames.

Firemen estimated damage at $100 to the apartment in the Sunday evening blaze.

CHICAGO (AP) — The head of a firm that tests consumer reaction say "hot pants" will fail to sell well on the American market because the word is "objectionable" to most people.

Louis Cheskin, president of louis Cheskin Associates, said even persons who like the extremely short shorts will rebel because "the name, 'hot pants' has no physcho-social acceptance."

Cheskin says he previously predicted the failure of the midiskirt and the Edsel automobile.

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The wives of the Apollo 14 astronauts went to the Manned Spacecraft Center Sunday night to watch their husbands perform science experiments in a 51-minute telecast.

The show, which astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr. closed with a plea for peace on earth, was not carried live on the television networks. Portions of it were included in news telecasts.

Shepard's wife, Louise, joined Stuart A. Roosa's wife, Joan, and Edgar Mitchell's wife, Louise, for lunch Sunday after church. It was their first social get-together of the moon flight.

MOBERLY, MO. (AP) — What would be the telephone operator's reaction if you asked her to place a long distance, person-to-person call to Astronaut Alan Sheperd - on the moon?

Radio station KWIX of Moberly tried a number of times.

One operator said:

"The moon? Really; Do you have a number and area code?"

Another, who took it in stride, said, "All right."

The newsman asked how long it would take and she said she didn't know. He said he would wait, but was discouraged when the condesencing operator replied, "O.K."

Many operators laughed, but one ended the fun with the stern rejoinder:

"Sir, there are no connections for civilians to the moon at this time. We are sorry."

When putting furniture oil on a dust mop, try pouring the oil in a sprinkler and sprinkling it on. When oiled this way, the mop will be able to take up the dust without leaving grease smudges.

In Defense of Women

by H. L. Mencken

HOW MARRIAGES ARE ARRANGED

I have said that women are not sentimental, i.e., not prone to permit mere emotion and illusion to corrupt their estimation of a situation. The doctrine, perhaps, will raise a protest. The theory that they are is itself a favorite sentimentality, one sentimentality will be brought up to substantiate another; dog will eat dog. But an appeal to a few obvious facts will be enough to sustain my contention, despite the vast accumulation of romantic rubbish to the contrary.

Turn, for example, to the field in which the two sexes come most constantly into conflict, and in which, as a result, their habits of mind are most clearly contrasted - to the field, to wit, of monogamous marriage. Surely no long argument is needed to demonstrate the superior competence and effectiveness of women here, and therewith their greater self-possession, their saner weighing of considerations, their higher power of resisting emotional suggestion. The very fact that marriages occur at all is a proof, indeed, that they are more cool-headed then men, and more adept in employing their intellectual resources, for it is plainly to a woman's interest to make a favourable marriage as soon as she can. The efforts of the two sexes are thus directed, in one of the capital concerns of life, to diametrically antagonistic ends. Which side commonly prevails? I leave the verdict to the jury. All normal men fight the thing off; some men are successful for relatively long periods; a few extraordinarily intelligent and courageous men (or perhaps lucky ones) escape altogether. But, taking one generation with another, as every one knows, the average man is duly married and the average woman gets a husband. Thus the great majority of women, in this clear-cut and endless conflict, make manifest their substantial superiority to the great majority of men.

Not many men, worthy of the name, gain anything of net value by marriage, at least as the institution is now met with in Christendom. Even assessing its benefits at their most inflated worth, they are plainly overborne by crushing disadvantages. When a man marries it is no more than a sign that the feminine talent for persuasion and intimidation — i.e., the feminine talent for survival in a world of clashing concepts and desires, the feminine competence and intelligence — has forced him into a more or less abhorrent compromise with his own honest inclinations and best interests. Whether that compromise be a sign of his relative stupidity or of his relative cowardice it is all one: the two things, in their symptonms and effects, are almost identical. In the first case he marries because he has been clearly bowled over in a combat of wits; in the second he resigns himself to marriage as the safest form of liaison. In both cases his inherent sentimentality is the chief weapon in the hand of his opponent. It makes him cherish the fiction of his enterprise, and even of his daring, in the midst of the most crude and obvious operations against him. It makes him accept as real the bold play-acting that women always excel at, and at no time more than when stalking a man. It makes him, above all, see a glamour of romance in a transaction which, even at its best, contains almost as much gross trafficking, at bottom, as the sale of a mule.

A man in full possession of the modest faculties that nature commonly apportions to him is at least far enough above idiocy to realize that marriage is a bargain in which he gets the worse of it, even when, in some detail or other, he makes a visible gain. He never, I believe, wants all the thing offers and implies. He wants, at most, no more than certain parts. He may desire, let us say, a housekeeper to protedt his goods and entertain his friends — but he may shrink from the thought of sharing his bathtub with any one, and home cooking may be downright poisonous to him. He may yearn for a son to pray at his tomb — and yet suffer acutely at the mere approach of relatives-in-law. He may dream of a beautiful and complaisant mistress, less exigent and mercurial than any a bachelor may hope to discover - and stand aghast at admitting her to his bank-book, his family-tree and his secret ambitions. He may want a company and not intimacy, or intimacy and not company. He may want a cook and not a partner in his business, or a partner in his business and not a cook. But in order to get the precise thing or things that he wants, he has to take a lot of other things that he doesn't want — that no sane man, in truth, could imaginably want — and it is to the enterprise of forcing him into this almost Armenian bargain that the woman of his "choice" addresses herself. Once the game is fairly set, she searches out his weaknesses with the utmost delicacy and accuracy, and plays upon them with all her superior resources. He carries a handicap from the start. His sentimental and unintelligent belief in theories that she knows quite well are not true — e. g., the theory that she shrinks from him, and is modestly appalled by the banal carnalities of marriage itself- gives her a weapon against him which she drives home with instinctive and compelling art. The moment she discerns this sentimentality bubbling within him — that is, the moment his oafish smirks and eye-rollings signify that he has achieved the intellectual disaster that is called falling in love — he is hers to do with as she will. Save for acts of God, he is forthwith as good as married.

super pizza loaf

One Dish Meal

This recipe tested and tasted in a Sikeston kitchen.

You're a pizza lover? Then why not try our undercover version for a change. It's a super supper or party idea — and not too costly or too difficult to prepare.

We've combined brown ground beef with favorite pizza seasonings and ingredients — oregano, garlic salt, onion, rich thick tomato paste and mushroom pieces. The tomato paste provides lively natural tomato taste, good consistency and full—bodied flavor.

Now you're ready to wrap up the works in a dough rectangle made from a package of hot roll mix. Before doing so though, sprinkle the beef mixture with lots of good cheese -- either Mozzarella or Jack. Creating the fancy look of the loaf is simple — just cut the dough into diagonal strips on each side of the meat, then crisscross the strips over the top. For the attractive finishing touch, brush the loaf with beaten egg and sprinkle with poppy seeds. Half an hour in a hot oven and it's ready to take to the table.

For supper we suggest completing the meal with a hearty vegetable soup and fruit of your choice. A warming menu idea for a blustery winter evening.

SUPER PIZZA WRAP—UP

1½ pounds ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
1 (4-ounce) can mushroom stems & pieces, drained
1 (6-ounce) can tomato paste
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon oregano
½ teaspoon garlic salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 (13-¾-ounce) package hot roll mix
1 cup shredded Mozzarella or Jack cheese
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon poppy seeds

Cook beef, onion and mushrooms in large skillet until meat browns, drain fat. Stir in tomato paste, flour, oregano, garlic salt and pepper; cook 5 minutes. Cool 10 minutes. Meanwhile, prepare hot roll mix according to package directions, except do not let dough rise. On lightly floured board, roll dough to 14-inch square; place on greased cookie sheet. Spoon meat mixture down center of dough to within 2 inches of both ends. Shape meat into loaf; sprinkle with cheese. Cut 6 diagonal strips of dough 2 inches wide on each side of meat. Fold dough ends over meat; then criss- cross strips over top. Brush top of dough with egg; sprinkle with poppy seeds. Bake at 400 degrees 30 minutes. Slice to serve. Makes 6 servings.

Governor's Lady: Alabama's Cornelia

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Mrs. George C. Wallace, the vivacious, dark-eyed brunette who is Alabama's new first lady, says the governor wooed her with "that old-time kind of courting."

"It was last spring when he first started courting," said Cornelia Wallace, 32, who married the 51-year-old Wallace, widower and the father of four, two weeks before his inauguration Jan. 18.

"He came to the house with his children but we didn't go out much. Frankly, neither of us wanted to be exposed to all the publicity.

"His children were promoting us. He was very depressed after Lurleen's death and they were worried about him," she said. "They had a lot to do with us getting married."

Mrs. Wallace, smartly clad in a grey wool dress and high black boots, spoke warmly in an interview of the governor's first wife, Lurleen, who died May 8, 1968, after a two-year bout with cancer.

Lurleen succeeded Wallace as governor when his first term expired in January 1967 and became the first woman in Alabama and the third in the nation to head a state government.

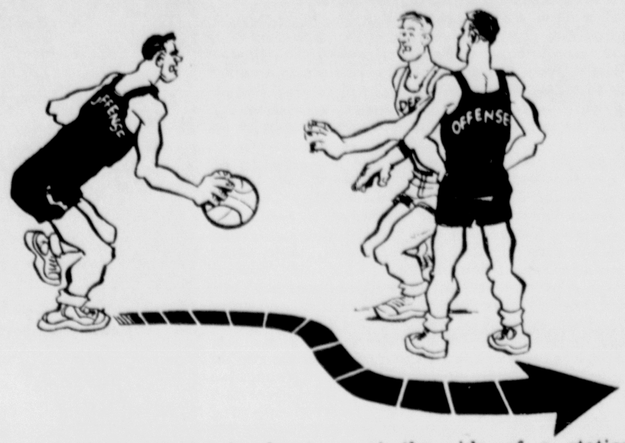
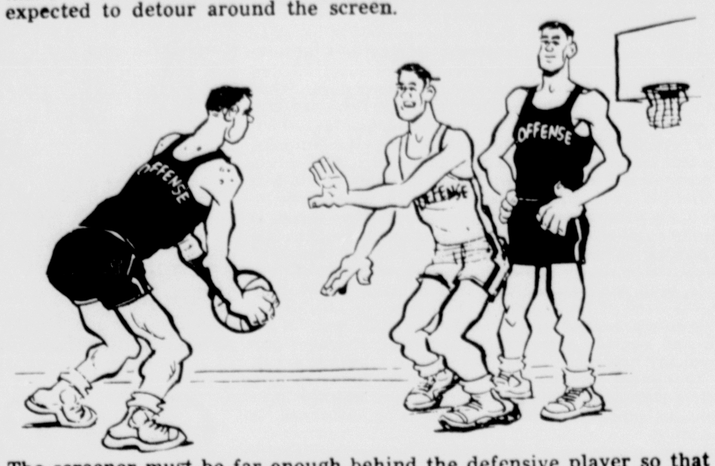
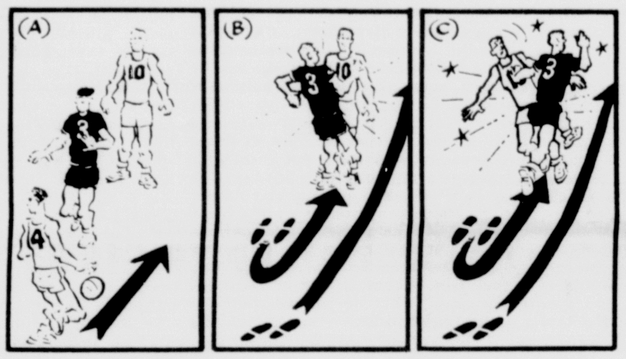
BASKETBALL RULES
Simplified and Illustrated



When a player screens in front or at the side of a stationary opponent, he may be as close as he desires providing he does not make contact. The defensive player can see him and therefore is expected to detour around the screen.



The screener must be far enough behind the defensive player so that the defensive player may take a normal step backward. When a stationary player is screened from behind, he must be able to take a normal step backward without contact, because the player being screened is not expected to see a screen behind him. Therefore, a player screened from behind is given additional protection by the rules.



Example A shows No. 10 setting a legal screen behind No. 3. No. 3 turns around and has plenty of room to change directions but he contacts No. 10 in example B. If No. 3 would stop now, nothing has happened because the contact has been slight and has not put anybody to disadvantage, but in example C No. 3 decided to keep right on going through the screener and now a foul has to be called on No. 3.

No. 3 has established a legal position. No. 4 if he were looking where he is going would have an opportunity to stop or change directions. If he continues on and runs over the top of No. 3, the foul will be charging on No. 4.

Brown Leads Comeback

ESSEX——Ronald Brown came off the bench to spark Richland to a 69—66 victory over Sikeston Saturday night, scoring six points in a big 20 point fourth quarter.

Brown sank two free throws in the last 29 seconds of regulation play to give the Rebels a little breathing space after a pair of steals by the 5—10 cager paved the way for the come back.

As usual when these two powerful clubs meet there are great team efforts and consistent individual performances, and Saturday night was no exception as the Sikeston duo of Lee King and Sam Tucker butted heads with the Sims brothers John and Dennis from Richland.

Right from the opening tip everyone in the gymnasium realized that the contest was going to go right down to the final gun, and it did. Both squads put every ounce of energy they had on the outcome of the contest, Sikeston was wanting to pull another upset like the one they had pulled over Dexter Friday night, and the Richland Rebels were wanting to get back on the winning track after being smashed by Charleston in their Tuesday night clash. The degree of the tension on the players showed in their field goal percentage in the first half as countless shots by both squads caroomed off the backboards.

The Sikeston quintet raced to a 14 to 10 lead at the close of the first quarter of play. It was in the second quarter that the Richland five made their move and move they did, slowly whittling down the Sikeston lead until they trailed by only one point, 30 to 29 at half time.

Whatever Coach Joplin told the Richland cagers must have worked because the Rebels kept firing away and found themselves on top of the game at the close of the third quarter by one point, 49—48.

What led to the downfall of the Sikeston cagers was the defense that Dennis Sims threw at Lee King in the fourth quarter. Going into the final period of play King had 23 points and he was the key to the Bulldog offense. Dennis Sims held the Sikeston ace to only two points in the final quarter. In the last 29 seconds of play Brown's two freethrows insured the victory.

Leading the scoring for the Rebels were the Sims brothers, with Johnny netting 19 and Dennis pouring in 17 points. Hot shooting Norman Cole was checked for only five points in the contest, far below his season average. The Bulldog barrage was paced by Lee King's 25 andSam Tucker's 15 points.

Defense Key in JV Win

ESSEX——The surprising Sikeston Bulldog B-team slipped up on the unsuspecting junior Richland Rebels in a Saturday night cage tilt to overpower the host 63—55. The Richland JV squad just a week ago captured the Stoddard County JV tourney with a smashing victory over the Bell City Cubs, but evidently the JV Bulldogs must not have heard of how tough the Rebels were, as the JV team from Sikeston just outplayed the Richland quintet to take home a deserved victory.

Sikeston led from the opening tip, and were never seriously threatened until late in the game. At half—time intermission the Bulldogs led 31 to 21, and thinking they had the game came out in the third quarter perhaps a bit too sure of themselves and were jumped on by the Rebels and outscored to tie the game 39 to 39 at the close of the third quarter. In the final period the JV Bulldogs meant business and unleashed an offensive effort that netted them 24 points while their defensive tactics held the Rebel squad to 16. The defensive effort of the Sikeston team is not to go unheraled because they checked the Richland "ace", Robert Jones, to four points and only six rebounds, this big man has been averaging in the high double figures in both departments.

TRJC Bows In Finals

FLAT RIVER——Three Rivers junior college of Poplar Bluff failed in their bid as repeat champions of the Mineral Area invitational tournament Saturday night, losing to the host 82—74.

The Raiders moved into the finals behind a 95—77 win over Jefferson Friday night. TRJC won its opener, 95—65, from Olney, Ill.

Larry Lawrence poured in 26 points and Roy Fields added 19 to head the semi—final triumph.

Fouls, 34 of them, led to the Raiders defeat as TRJC out-scored the host 28—24 from the field but suffered a 34—18 beating at the line.

All this came despite the return of Roy Fields and John Johnson to the Raiders lineup. The pair sat out the first half of the season.

The game was tied 40—40 at the half, but as the fouls mounted the reserves had to play most of the second half and fell eight points short as the Raiders record dipped to 13—8.

Frosty Copenhaver and Dennis Hobbs pumped in 21 points apiece to head the MA offense, which included five other players with points.

Roy Fields headed the Raiders offense with 13 points. Fred Johnson added 12 and Larry Lawrence 10 to round out the double figure scoring.

Copenhaver was named the tournament's most outstanding player, an award won by Fred Johnson last season when the Raiders claimed the title.

TRJC plays at Helena, Ark. tonight against Phillips County JC.

Bearcats Win 14th

DEXTER——A pressuring man-to-man defense and some accurate shooting lifted Coach Jim Hall's Dexter high Bearcats to its 14th win of the season Saturday night, beating Jackson 72—48.

The Bearcat defense pressured the Indians into numerous floor mistakes, which the Cats capitalized on to race to a 27—7 first quarter lead and never was headed.

Dexter shot 59 per cent from the field in the first half, netting 20 of 34 field tries, as it rang up a 46—16 halftime edge.

Terry Demaree paced a nine player offensive attack for the Bearcats with 18 points. The Cats starters saw limited action after the opening quarter.

The SEMO conference victory left the Cats 3—2 while it raised its overall mark to 14—5.

Jackson salvaged a split as its B-team started the evenings action with a victory.

SIKESTON CITY DUMP, and offender in the solid waste pollution problem, is a situation the town as a whole can resolve. The city council and other administrators cannot solve the problem, however, without the backing and support of the townspeople. YOU can help!

The Sordid Solids

Solid waste means rubbish and garbage — newspapers, beer cans, broken glass, plastic bottles, ham bones, grass cuttings, old mattresses, junked cars — all the things we throw away. Disposal means picking them up, transporting them to their final destination, and then burning, burying, or otherwise treating them.

We Americans generate a staggering amount of solid waste. Our daily throw-away average is now more than five pounds for each man, woman, and child. (And when industrial and demolition wastes are included, the daily average per person becomes ten pounds instead of 5.30. Someone has calculated that if New York City's domestic garbage was heaped in Yankee Staduim, it would make a mile-high mountain within a year.

Solid waste disposal is the government's third most expensive service, coming right after highways and schools. In New York it costs thirty cents to pick up a littered bottle from the roadside, and it costs more to dispose of the Sunday New York Times than to buy it.

Collecting methods haven't changed in a century. Noisy trucks go from door to door, are loaded inefficiently by high-cost labor, and then driven to a discharge area which is located as far away as possible. Collecting incidentally, is so profitable that in many places where it is handled by private contractors the Mafia have been in charge for years.

The favorite American method of treatment is old-fashioned dumping because it is cheap. An open dump handles the stuff for $1 to $3 per ton; a well-run dump costs about fifty cents more a ton. So we have some 12,000 dumps used by collection services and — either through ignorance or to save that fifty cents a ton — more than 11,000 of them are so poorly managed that they present a constant threat of disease, land blight, and air and water pollution.

Dumps account for about 90 per cent of the disposal; incinerators take care of the rest. Incinerators sound more progressive, but the fact is, almost half are so antiquated that they will soon have to be replaced and seven out of ten lack adequate air-pollution control devices.

This slovenly, outdated, air-and water polluting national garbage disposal plant of ours, which can barely deal with today's rubbish, now faces alarming new problems. Among them:

The amount of rubbish is increasing more than twice as fast as the population. It has gone up 60 per cent since 1950, and is expected to triple between now and 1980. The packaging industry keeps on adding layers of paper, and individuals buy more things and throw them out sooner.

"Throwaway" products from hypodermics and diapers to furniture are proliferating. Because the old softdrink bottles made 24 round trips to the factory, anti-litter interest introduced laws against non-returnable bottles in legislatures last year. All were unsuccessful.

Many new materials are nondegradable — nature can't cope with them. Tin cans rusted eventually, but aluminum cans and plastic bottles are immortal.

Nearly all cities and many suburbs are running out of convenient dumping sites. In desperation they are turning to estuaries, marshes, and flood plains where the damage they do is irreversible.

"We're running in front of an avalanche," warns a Chicago expert, "and it's already begun to bury us."

New Ways to Deal with Waste

The new methods of wast management vary widely because no two communities have the same problems and no single technique will work everywhere. But they all have one thing in common: they get vlaue from waste.

Ann Landers

Answering Intimate Questions Publicly

Dear Ann Landers: I wouldn't believe this if it hand't happened to me. The other evening my husband and I took our two young sons out to dinner. We were enjoying ourselves when suddenly a loud-mouth walked over to our table and said,"My wife and I have a bet. I say those two boys are adopted. My wife says they aren't." My husband and I were stunned. The man continued, "I'm sure I win the bet because you two are both dark complected and black-haired and the kids are fair."

I was so taken by surprise I didn't know what to say. I replied,"The boys are not adopted. They resemble my side of the family. I am the only brunet."

When the man left, the boys began to ask questions. My husband was furious. He said I should have told the slob it was none of his business. Although my husband is probably right. I feel that had I refused to answer his question the boys might have got the impressions that perhaps they WERE adopted. Please give us your opinoin. ----H.T.

Dear H.T.: Sorry, I'm with your husband. Strangers who ask intimate questions don't deserve a civil reply. After the man left you couldthen have pointed out to the boys what a rude question it was and explained that it is not unusual for two dark parents to have light complexioned, blond children, and vice versa.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently, a dearly loved, much admired and respected man died. He was an ideal husband and father, a community leader, financially successful and the sort of person everyone looked up to. After his death his wife and adult children went through his personal belongings -- together. What they found was shattering and heartbreaking. They discovered a collection of pornographic magazines and books, stacks of obscene pictures and a suitcase filled with stag movies.

The family is crushed. They now feel his life was a sham -- that he was a hypocrite. No one can understand it. How could a person have kept his true charactere so completely hidden from those who were so close to him? A prurient interest in sex is as unlike this man as night is from day. Please explain. ---Stunned in Connecticut

Dear Stunned: It is not unusual for a person to have a private, kooky, compartment in his life -- ranging from the slightly offbeat to the wildly bizarre. This needn't mean the person was evil or sinister. It merely means that in this particular area he had a strudel in his noodle.

Dear Ann Landers: My cousin and I married brothers of European background. Our in-laws have been in this country for over 20 years. They speak good English when they want to, but they don't want to when my cousin and I are around.

Last night my husband was saying something to me in English. My father-in-law interruped in their native tongue. My husband then responded in there native language and I couldn't understand one single word after that. I'm sure his dad told him to stop talking English.

My cousin and I have had several arguments with our husbands about this. We feel they should have enough respect for us to tell their parents to speak English in our presence. Our husbands refuse to do it. What's the answer? ----Tower of Babel

Dear Babs: You and your cousin should have long since learned some words in your in-laws native tongue. It would have demonstrated a desire to be a bonafide members of the tribe. And it would have endeared you to them permanently. Get your husbands to teach you some words and phrases. Try them out on the in-laws soon. It will improve the relationships immensely.

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits -- the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-Age Sex -- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Industry Rejects Bootheel Location Because of Problems

NEW MADRID, — Severe labor problems at the Noranda Aluminum Inc. construction site were partially responsible for causing the Scott Paper Company to reject Missouri's Bootheel as a site for a $200 million plant, a company source said Thursday.

Scott's choice for expansion in the Midwest had narrowed to two sites — one near Caruthersville and the other 35 miles to the south near Blytheville, Ark.

Before shelving expansion plans until the nation's economy picks up again, however, Scott had crossed Caruthersville off the list.

A company source said one reason was problems experienced at the St. Jude Industrial Park where the aluminum plant and adjacent generating plant are being built.

Union featherbedding, jurisdictional disputes and inflation have been blamed for boosting costs of the project by $93 million, an increase of 51 per cent above the original estimate of $183.6 million.

Some of the unions involved in the construction at the Noranda site has jurisdiction across the Missouri - Arkansas line.

Other factors in Scott's decision, the source said, were the availability of labor, wage levels and tax structures. He declined to indicate which factor played the biggest role in the decision.

The Scott expansion would have meant an eventual 1,000 production jobs for the depressed Bootheel area, which is desperately looking for new industry to stem a population decrease.

With a paper mill and manufacturing and distribution facilities, the expansion over an eight to ten year period would have cost about $200 million.

Scott still holds options on property near Blytheville, although the source said a location decision still has not been made.

That Caruthersville was being considered as a site by Scott had been announced by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

Hearnes, who played a leading role in persuading Noranda to come to Missouri, last week said his office would attempt to iron out labor difficulties at the plant site.

Dewey Neely, president of the Caruthersville Chamber of Commerce, said the community is "very much concerned" about the Noranda labor situation and its effect on attracting industry to the area.

Loss of the Scott plant has caused Caruthersville officials to dust off a $7,000 report made in 1965 on the area's potential for new industry.

Neely said the chamber is in the process of sending out letters to prospective industries.

"It's our own fault if we didn't follow up before," Neely said. "We just can't keep on losing people. Pretty soon there will just be empty stores here."

But Neely and others in the Bootheel are perplexed in trying to iron out construction labor problems.

"What we can do about it, I don't know," Neely said. "But we're going to try."

Illmo Man Dies In Battle

ILLMO--An Army career man of Illmo died Thursday in South Vietnam of wounds received in battle Jan. 26 and a Scott City soldier is hospitalized in Okinawa after being injured in the Vietnam conflict.

Staff Sgt. Larry Hunter Marshall, 33 years old, whose wife Mrs. Linda Marshall and their five children in Illmo, had been in serious condition since struck in the head by a missile on the January date.

He was due to return to the United States on Feb. 28, his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Palmer of Scott City, said.

The hospitalized soldier, Pfc. Terry D. Wadlington, 20 son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wadlington of Scott City, was injured Jan. 18 when hit by a bullet which passed through his right leg, fracturing the bone.

He telephoned his parents Monday night to report his physician is satisfied with his progress although he must undergo surgery before the leg is put in a cast. He said he is now in traction and expects to be returned to a hospital in the United States in three weeks, his mother said.

The fatal wound was the second one recently in battle by Sergeant Marshall last month. On Jan. 7, he suffered a minor injury to his arm and was able to return to duty.

Mrs. Palmer said his wife received a letter dated Jan. 25 in which he told of expecting to return to this country the last of February.

His wife and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ike Marshall, of St. Louis were first notified of his latest injury by telegram from the Department of Defense on Jan. 27. They have received four more telegrams on his condition since that time, Mrs. Palmer said.

Marshall was born in Blodgett and attended the Illmo Scott City high school, He enterend the Army when he was 17, He served six months in South Vietnam before his last tour of duty expired in November, 1969. After remaining a civilian here for a few months, he reenlisted early in 1970 and was in Korea for a time. He went back to Vietnam last April.

The five children here are: Shelby, Larry Wayne, Tammy, Mary Kay and Terry May, who are twins.

Other survivors include the paternal grandmother, Mrs. Anna Marshall of Blodgett.

The body will be brought to Illmo for services.

Pfc. Wadlington was injured when his infantry patrol was ambushed, his mother said.

He graduated from Illmo Scott City high school in the spring of 1969 and worked for Central Foods, Inc. at Cape Girardeau before entering the Army March 3, 1970.

He took his basic training at Ft. Leonard Wood and then went to Fort Ord, Calif. He was home on leave last August before going to South Vietnam where he was serving in the Chu Lai area when injured. In December , he received the Infantry Rifleman's Badge for active ground duty.

The Indian state of Orissa is a bit larger than Florida, but has three times the population density — 332 people per square mile.

Cold February Is in Prospect

PORTAGEVILLE — Weather patterns expected through February will result in below normal temperature average and near normal precipitation total over the Missouri Bootheel.

The flow of cold air entering the Nation from the north will be concentrated over the region from the Mississippi Valley eastward. Precipitation reaching the Bootheel will accompany cold fronts at times. More extensive rain patterns forming on fronts in the Gulf Region may occasionally spread far enough northward to reach Southeast Missouri. These present the greatest potential for snow or freezing rain, since cold air will have pushed the front southward and overlay the region on which overruning precipitation will fall.

The daily forecast and extended outlook will continue to be the best guidance tools for anticipating such developments. Travellers should be especially wary about embarking on trips without checking weather reports along your route. Clear skies over Southeast Missouri do not guarantee open roads to your destination.

Just as in January, the temperature trends are likely to include alternating warm and cold spells. Ice forming on potential skating ponds should be tested thoroughly before permitting children to venture forth. At the same time, livestock producers may be faced with the need to break the ice cover over unheated water sources. A regular check of weather forecasts will help you anticipate the need to provide shelter and warmth for newborn animals.

A number of farmers have already taken advantage of the freezing weather that firmed up soils sufficiently for top dressing wheat. Those who have not can expect to find several periods of favorable conditions this month.

Winds have been the most effective weather factor to help reduce excessive moisture from Bootheel soils during January. Brisk breezes coupled with the frequent flow of cold and dry air over the area dried out top layers in some areas so that dust was rising behind equipment putting out nitrogen early in february. The drier the soil, the less freezing is required to firm it up for traffic. Farmers who get the job done as early as possible will avoid any complications from additional rains or snows in the next few weeks.

Peach growers will be looking to put on dormant sprays sometime during this period. Again, forecasts and extended outlooks will help pinpoint those days which are calm enough for spray applications, and following which the temperature will remain above freezing for 24 to 48 hours.

January precipitation was generally below normal, judging from reports from Agricultural Reporting Stations maintained by the National Weather Service. Tehe outstanding exception noted to date was Poplar Bluff where 4.72 inches collected. Sikeston measured 3.77 inches, Malden 2.61, and Portageville 2.15 inches.

Normal precipitation during February for the bootheel as a whole is 3.71 inches. Normals for individual cities:

Cape Girardeau 3.19 inches, Dexter 3.84 inches, Fisk 3.54 inches, New Madrid 4.24 inches, Poplar Bluff 3.45 inches, Caruthersville 4.08 inches, Doniphan 3.61 inches, Morehouse 3.55 inches, Parma 3.98 inches and Sikeston 3.86 inches.

Short term averages for other points:

Advance 3.12 inches, Bloomfield 3.94 inches, Clearwater Dam 3.39 inches, Kennett 4.66 inches, Portageville 4.17 inches, Qulin 3.44 inches, Malden 3.91 inches, Puxico 3.48 inches, Bernie 3.78 inches, Charleston 3.37 inches, Deering 4.50 inches, Malden 3.91 inches and Wappapello Dam 3.35 inches.

LARRY DIXON is with Marguerite Piazza 1971 National American Cancer Society education and fund - raising crusade chairman. Marguerite Piazza, star of opera, concert, night club and television will salute Missouri crusaders in a personal appearance in St. Louis March 9.

Dixon Named Chairman of Cancer Crusade

JEFFERSON CITY — Dr. Neill Berry, president of the Missouri division of the American Cancer Society announces that Larry Dixon of Springfield will serve as 1971 Missouri April Crusade chairman.

Dixon served in that capacity in 1970. "Under his leadership the division sustained a record 13.7 percent increase over 1969 and set a new all-time record of $1,084,437," Dr. Berry noted.

" 'We want to wipe out cancer in your lifetime' is our 1971 motto," Berry said.

POPULAR TANGERINE

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) The San Diego County Farm Bureau says tangerines, sometimes called the "zippered" fruit because of a peeling that almost unzips itself, are more plentiful than ever.

Believed to be a native of China, the tangerine first reached this country in the 19th century when the Italian consul at New Orleans planted tangerine trees on the consulate grounds.

The bureau says the tangerine is low in calories and rich in vitamin A. A Gourmet Magazine describes it as "an orange with a sense of fair play ... it neither oozes, squashes or squirts at us."

Cape to Intervene In Utilities Merger

CAPE GIRARDEAU——Cape Girardeau will intervene in the proposed stock exchange between Missouri Utilities Co. here and Union Electric Co. of St. Louis, the City Council decided Wednesday night.

A citizen's committee was appointed to study the company's request for an increase in electric rates.

Intervention in the proposed merger of the two companies would be before the Federal Securities Exchange Commission, City Manager W. G. Lawley told the council in recommending the action.

Missouri Utilities' appeal for a 13½ per cent increase in electric rates to its southeast and central Missouri customers is now pending before the Missouri Public Service Commission in Jefferson City. Cape Girardeau's city attorney, Howard C. Wright Jr., has notified the commission the municipality will intervene.

Lawley said the city has until Feb. 22 to intervene in the proposed stock exchange.

The city manager said it is his opinion the merger would act to restrict competition in the utilities field by continuing the operation of a gas utility company by an electric utility company.

The City of Cape Girardeau is presently involved in the Missouri Utilities' natural gas rate increase proposal pending before the Public Service Commission in Jefferson City. The city formally intervened and in December participated in a cross-examination of the parties involved-- the city, the company and PSC staff--held in Jefferson City. Oral arguments on briefs filed since the hearing are scheduled for Feb. 16 before the PSC.

Malden Man Has Appollo 14 Role

COLORADO SPRINGS——The Apollo 14 astronauts will be kept posted on space-object traffic in earth orbit -- information that U. S. Air Force Technical Sergeant Boyce W. Clayton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Talmadge Clayton, 405 N. Kimball St., Malden, Mo. helped provide.

Sergeant Clayton assists in computer-oriented accounting of space objects orbiting the earth, including 456 military and civilian payloads and 1,653 pieces of "junk". Each circles the earth 16 times daily, producing a possible 20,000 crossings of the Apollo 14 earth orbit.

The sergeant, a space tracking and control technician, is assigned to the 1151st Special Activities Squadron at Ent AFB, Colo. He works in the underground Space Defense Center operated by USAF's Aerospace Defense Command for the joint U. S.—Canadian North American Air Defense Command (NORAD).

The center serves as a command post for a world-wide network of electronic and optical sensors that detect and track objects in space.

The sergeant's support of Apollo 14 is an on-going effort. Orbital analysts on the staff of the center, continually determine elements, such as the shape and size of orbits, the angles at which they cross the equator and the rate of changes of any elements.

When computing orbital elements, the staff figures many factors, including variations in the earth's gravitational field, gravitational influences of sun and moon, atmospheric "drag" and solar radiation pressure.

The data furnished to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) preceding and during a space flight. Technicians in the underground center at Ent use computers in a special Computation of Miss Between Orbits (COMBO) support program during an Apollo mission.

NASA uses COMBO finformation to insure that the Apollo capsule is far from collision. Chances of such an accident are rare. The possibility of the astronauts' sighting another satellite are less rare. NASA could direct the Apollo 14 flight crew to seek a sighting of a specific object at an exact location.

Sergeant Clayton has more than 14 years of service.

The sergeant's wife, Barbara, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Reed, 513 N. Kimball St., Malden. He is a 1957 graduate of Malden high school.

Dear Mr. Blanton:

I would like to express my appreciation and that of the State Highway Department for the excellent editorials which have recently appeared in the Daily Standard concerning the Intercity—Interregional Highway Plan that has been recommended by the State Highway Commission. We in the Department feel that it is a very realistic plan, that it will provide excellent benefits to the users of Missouri's highways, and that the price is reasonable.

We sincerely appreciate your support of this plan, and your continued support of our efforts to provide the best possible highway system for the least cost.

Very truly yours,
W. H. Shaw

The Prayer from the upper room

God has not destined us to the terrors of judgement, but to the full attainment of salvation through our Lord Juesus Christ. (I Thessalonians 5:9 NEB)

PRAYER: Dear God, I thank you for turning my life in Your direction because I have accepted Your Son Christ as my Savior. Help me to show in my living the light I have received from Him. Amen.

Florida Loses Ardor for Limited -Income Retirees

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — State officials, hard pressed to keep up with citizen service demands, have taken themselves out of the business of encouraging retirees of limited income to move to Florida.

"Florida no longer desires to be known as the fastest growing state in the union," state Senate President Jerry Thomas said Monday.

"We have our hands full taking care of over 6.8 million permanent residents without encouraging more."

Florida leaped to ninth in population in 1970 from 10th in 1960, with a gain of 1.9 million residents. State leaders project a 35 per cent increase to 9 million by 1980.

Thomas appealed to the state Senate Ways and Means Committee to block any 1971-72 fiscal year budget request which would be used to encourage people to move into the state permanently.

He also urged the committee to see that appropriations for industrial development spell out that only "environmentally clean" industry is being sought.

"Many of our senior citizens who have come to Florida to retire are learning that it is not quite the inexpensive state as some promoters led them to believe," Thomas declared.

Two weeks ago, L. K. Ireland, Gov. Reubin Askew's top budget officer, questioned the need for the $5.2 million the state Division of Commercial Development planned to spend in 1971-72.

Roy Thompson Jr., division director, said he now spends only about $3,000 out of a $5 million budget on promotional material for retirees and that this small sum is solely for pamphlets sent on request.

"We're not actively encouraging them to come, but we're not putting up the barriers on the Georgia line, either," he said.

The main promotional dollar now is concentrated on bringing the bigger spender to Florida, the man who makes $15,000 a year or more, he said.

"The man making that kind of money has shown a tendency to go other places. We're getting pretty stiff competition from California, Hawaii, Europe and the Islands," Thompson added.

"The Islands" are the Bahamas and the Caribbean islands.

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — The University of Denver played an intrasquad game and Dave (Stretch) Bustion, a 6-8 transfer from Northeastern, Colo., Junior College, scored 32 points.

Rural Home Damaged By Smoke

PORTAGEVILLE——The home of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Noffel, east of Portageville on River Road was seriously damaged by heavy smoke Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Noffel were in the kitchen preparing a snack before retiring for the evening when the door bell at the back of the house sounded.

Believing someone was at the back door, Mrs. Noffel went to answer. When she opened the utility it was found full of smoke. Apparently the alarm was shorted out by the fire which has not gained much headway, the alarm had also burned the wires connected to the telephone. Mr. Noffel rushed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Ray next door where the fire department was summoned, which arrived promptly. There was very little fire damage Noffel said, but the entire area of the home will have to be done over because of the smoke.

Noffel said, "we were lucky the door alarm sounded in time to prevent our home from possibly being a complete loss."

Noffel also related Portageville has one of the very best Fire Departments to be found anywhere. The local fireman cannot be praised too highly. Thanks men for a job well done.

Under Twenty

By ASTRID CARSON

Dear Astrid: I enjoy reading your column very much. However, I cannot help but slightly disagree with you now and then. In your response to LISA, you advise her to allow her ex-boy friend to "prove himself" after he had already been caught cheating on her. Anyone who cheats on his or her steady is verly likely to do it again. The aspect of love (or fondness) should be set aside. If a guy has any feeling at all for his girl, he would never cheat on her. Perhaps I sound like a prejudiced girl, but I am of the male gender. Hang in there, Astrid, you are doing a very commendable job. --Helpful

Dear Helpful: Thanks. You're probably right when you say that the boy who cheats once is like to do it again. The key word is "likely" Lisa like any other girl, has to decide for herself whether or not he deserves another chance. If she decides he does, she should be very sure he understands that she is no patsy and that he has to show her he can play it straight. We all make mistakes, and if nobody got a second chance, we'd all be losers.

Dear Astrid: My boy friend is 18, and has gone into the Navy. I'm 17 and am serious about him. My folks don't think I should sit home and wait for him to come home on leave. They tell me I'm too young to sit and wait, yet I don't care to get to know anyone else. He calls me and I pay the phone bill. I have a part-time job and it's my money. It's true my father helped make a down payment on my car and I'm making the payments on it now. My mother and I have had arguments about a lot of things. I'm still in school and can't date during the week. She worries about my safety too much. I'm a big girl and I know what I'm doing. I have plenty of nice clothes and don't want for too much.

Yet my mother and I don't get along, and we fight mostly over my cluttered room and the car. She threatens to ground me if I don't tell her where I'm going. I'll be 18 in February and will be of age and I feel then I won't have to tell her where I'm going. My mother smiles and talks to my friends, but I think it is just a front to keep tabs on me. She says she's concerned and only wants the best for me. I wish I was out on my own., and I think when I am, I'll never asks her to my apartment. She'd only want to snoop around, and I don't think Ill miss her all that much. --GeeCee

Dear GeeCee: Whew! You and your mother really have a thing going - a bad thing! Want to know the truth? You are 18 (give or take a week or two) and you've got a mother-daughter relationship that sounds like 13 or 14. It really doesn't much matter whose fault it is, the fact is, it exists, and you aren't responding at all in a mature fashion to a problem. Is it really worth the fight NOT to tell your mother where you are going? What can she find out from your friends that will upset you? Probably nothing. She may be over concerned, over protective, overly inquisitive and obviously, overly bugs you. But, they are little things in the big scheme of things. When you do get your emancipation declaration, you'll be able to do the things you want when you want. In the meantime, the things that upset you aren't really worth getting all that upset about. As for your boy friend, that's really your decision. Your parents can advise you, but they can't make you date or care for others. Between work and friends, you can find enough to do to keep you busy and happy until he comes home if that's what you want. I'm not puttin you down, GeeCee, but I'm sure you can handle your family problems with more maturity.

That's The Law

Georgie Does Scare Frank

THE CASE OF THE EYE FLUTTERING BANDIT
By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Georgie sashayed very daintily into Frank's liquor store and, in a high soprano voice, announced: "Your money or your life!" Whereupon, Georgie produced a revolver and Frank produced the money.

A short time later, Georgie fell into the hands of the law and was charged with robbery. In court, he-man Frank looked at eye-fluttering Georgie and testified:

"Sure. That's the cream puff that came into my store. But, he didn't scare me for a minute. If I had blown a kiss at him, he would have fallen over."

Whereupon, Georgie's lawyer demanded that the charges against his client be dismissed.

"Under the law," helpointed out,"robbery is the taking of property by force or fear. If Frank wasn't afraid, obviously, there was no robbery."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you dismiss the charges against eye-fluttering Georgie?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that despite Frank's bravado, there was no question that he was scared. For after all, noted the judge, men do not ordinarily give up their hard-earned cash to a stranger who threatens him with a gun except out of fear of bodily harm.

It was incorrectly reported in the Daily Standard that Kelley was arrested.

Crucified Thieves

Supt. Twitty Says

No 'Aptitude' For Mathematics

Emily Lynne is his only child. She's 22 and a student at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale. About his daughter..."She knows a smattering about a lot of things, reads everything she can get her hands on, and retains it," he said. "Independent? Oh, yes!!"

Miriam, Emily's mother, died in 1967.

Twitty has done graduate work at Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., Columbia University, New York, and a half-dozen military schools. Will he, after retiring from the Sikeston schools, separate himself from an educational environment?

"I would like to work with a small college, teaching teachers," he said. His philosophy about teachers is startling.

He's the answer to a first grader's mother's dream. Given a group of applicants for a teaching position.... "The first things I would look for are personality traits — a genuine liking for kids, the ability to communicate," he said. "Of course, educational background, but that's farther down the list. Enthusiasm. Imaginative thinking. It's contagious. Even other teachers benefit from a bubbly person." And so do parents.

His comments on school issues were poignant.

Of his 20 years in Sikeston:

"We haven't accomplished everything we've set out to do, but we've made great strides," he said. "Of course, they would have taken place even if I hadn't been here, but we're considered one of the best systems in the state. We have good community support, a good physical plant, fine faculty, but we need a kindergarten facility and an additional middle school. Would I do anything differently? Yes, I'd loosen the structure of the program, but I haven't had the nerve to make all the necessary changes...they're too revolutionary!"

His answer to that frequently asked question:

"Today's kids? They're sharper, more demanding and inquiring. Less disciplined, perhaps, but tremendous. I think there's validity in some of their protest, but I believe that we're obliged to change the structure of things, not just evade them. I'd like to have more contact with kids. Teaching them facts is not the most important thing you do. Give them a sense of discrimination and the ability to reason logically."

His personal tastes, pleasures, foods... people?

"I like intelligent, thinking people around me," he said. "I'd like to surround myself with them. I'm not, necessarily, but I'd like that. I cook a little bit, but I'm a beefsteak man, you know."

He likes E.E. Cummins' poetry and contemporary authors such as Vonnegut appeal to him, along with Faulkner and Hemingway.

"You're going to think this is a little funny, but I know that every night I'm going to wake up about 2 a.m., so I just keep a book handy....I read until about 5. I just don't need very much sleep." Strange for someone else, perhaps, but not for Twitty.

"Do you intend to write, later?" I asked.

"Yes, but not the kind of writing you think",,he smiled. "It'll probably be about the kind of wood carving I do for a hobby."

He was right, of course, but then I just didn't have the nerve to tell him that before meeting him, I had expected Sikeston's retiring school superintendent to be a little old man.....ready for a rocking chair.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Disappearing Budget Deficit May Reach $30 Billion; Here's Report on Nixon's Hush-Hush GOP Conference; Senators Want Nixon To Nudge Agnew On Fillibuster.

Environmental Proposals Seek New Pollution Controls, Levies

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon sent Congress today his environmental proposals for 1971, including brand new programs to control noise, ocean dumping, and the industrial and commercial use of toxic substances.

The President also proposed to tax the use of lead in gasoline and to levy a charge on the airpolluting sulphur content of energy fuels, a measure whose greatest impact would be on the cost

As promised earlier, Nixon called for adoption by Congress of a national land use policy, which would lean heavily on the authority of state governments to regulate critical uses of their land.

The package also repeated Nixon's call, contained a week ago in his budget proposals for fiscal 1972, to increase federal aid forconstruction of waste treatment facilities to a level of $2 billion per year over the next three years.

But the President's proposals would also give the new Environmental Protection Agency a stronger hand in enforring water quality standards by allowing it to impose administrat ve fines up to $25,000.

And it would permit citizen suits against water polluters, such as were authorized against air polluters in the 1970 Air Quality Act.

As announced previously, the President sought authority to place limitations upon industrial and municipal waste discharges into virtually all United States waters, including ground water.

In all, said Russell E. Train, chairman of the President's Council on Environmental Quality, the program would require passage of about 14 pieces of legislation.

Train told newsmen the bills would be sentto Congress within a few days, perhaps on Wednesday.

Sunday Sales Act Repeal to Be Sought

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — House and Senate committees will be considering a batch of legislation this week, including a dozen or more of major interest.

One of the most controversial is expected to be repeal of the Sunday Sales Act, the 1963 law that was enacted hurriedly after the Missouri Supreme Court reversed itself and held the ancient "Blue Laws" were unenforceable.

In December 1961, the supreme court said the Blue Laws that barred most any Sunday action were still constitutional and enforceable. But 16 months later the court, after another close look, rejected the laws as unenforceable.

So the legislature drafted a new law, still on the books, permitting Sunday sales of food, drugs and souvenirs, but barring sales of automobiles, plumbing supplies, baby bottles, hardware or clothing.

Since then there have been spotty violations, liberal unenforcement and only a few cases of vigorous enforcement.

The Senate Municipal Corporations Committee will be hearing only the proponents of the repeal bill Wednesday afternoon with opponents to be given their chance at a later date.

Other issues that will be under scrutiny by either House or Senate committees this week would:

Boost workmen's compensation benefits.

Let automobile dealers or their agents collect auto and driver license fees.

Extend the merit system to all state employes.

Authorize local county or municipal officials to act in cases of civil emergency, either riot, man-made or natural disaster.

Guns Recovered Following Arrest

NEW MADRID——Guns reported stolen in Arkansas were recovered Saturday following the arrest Friday night of Richard Miller Jr., 22, Catron, and Isaac Woods, 20, Elgin, Ill., on traffic charges by State Trooper Carroll Plunkett and Lilbourn Marshal Johnnie Barnes.

The pair was brought to the sheriff's office where information has been received on the gun theft.

Deputy Sheriff Flip Dees reported a search Saturday by Deputy Shorty Price, Plunkett, Barnes, Parma Marshal Doc Lindley, and Risco Marshal Alfred Scott led to the recovery of a 308 rifle, 30 carbine, and .22 rifle, reported stolen from a pawn shop in Blytheville, and two pistols, which had been obtained by trading the stolen rifles.

Miller and Woods waived extradition and were returned to Arkansas today. A third suspect, Robert Lee Woods, is being sought in Elgin.

LAOS, new target of South Vietnam and United States.

Strike in Laos Called Limited

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States declared today that the South Vietnamese-U.S. strike against Communist bases in Laos will be limited in "time and area" and will protect American lives in the course of further trool withdrawals.

"This limited operation is not an enlargement of the war," the State Department said in a policy statement.

Press officer Robert J. McCloskey said his understanding is that the operation in which the United States is supplying air support for thousands of South Vietnamese troops, will be limited to the area between the 16th and 17th parallel. That would keep it within the southern Laos panhandle and the region of the Communist supply center of Sepone.

McCloskey declined to define the time limitation. Under questioning he said that the limits determined by South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu would apply to U.S. air support also.

President Nixon made the basic decision on striking at the North Vietnamese sanctuaries recently, McCloskey said. He declined to be more specific.

The eight-point statement on U.S. policy promised an announcement by President Nixon in April on further withdrawals of U.S. forces, linking this to the Lao operation.

It also sought to meet any charges that the operation conflicts with the Cooper-Church restriction on U.S. operations in Indochina by saying that the new move "is consistent with statutory requirements."

As the Defense Department had done Sunday night, the comprehensive policy statement today pledged that no American ground combat forces or advisers would cross into Laos.

It repeated the South Vietnamese government's definition of the objective of the operations as being to destroy supplies and forces concentrated in Laos by the North Vietnamese.

"The operation will promote the security and safety of American and allied forces in South Vietnam," the statement said, "and is consistent with statutory requirements.

"It will make the enemy less able to mount offenses and (will) strengthen South Vietnam's ability to defend itself as U.S. forces are withdrawn from South Vietnam. It will protect American lives."

12 Left Homeless By Portageville Fire

PORTAGEVILLE——Two families including eight children were left homeless following a fire at 2 a.m. Sunday east of the Bay.

The fire originated at the home of Peter Johnson, who was smoking meat in a smoke house on the side of the home. The fire quickly spread to the home of Jim Frank Jennings.

Both homes were destroyed and both families lost all their furnishings and clothes.

Portageville Fire Chief Jitney Foster said "there was no chance to save the homes." The firemen prevented a third home from burning.

Foster reported Peter Johnson was rescued from the flaming dwelling by Roosevelt Hues, who dragged Johnson out of the house when the walls began falling.

Foster said an appeal is being made for clothes for the Jennings children, ranging in age from two to 12 and household furnishings for both families.

Persons having items may leave them at Jitney's Market Basket.

Cable Television Here

Cable television is coming to Sikeston in late April according to Travis Garrett, general manager of See—mor Cable Television. He said this morning that residents of Sikeston, Miner and a few nearby residents would begin receiving service then.

Construction was delayed for nearly a year because of Federal Communications Commission approval. Support wiring and cables are now being laid.

Garrett said that 70 per cent of Sikeston now has support wiring and 40 per cent has cables.

CATV will offer network affiliated channels 3,6, and 12, and ultra-high frequency channels 21 from Murray and 29 from Paducah. Educational television channel 8 from Carbondale, Ill., will also be available.

Officials from channel 29 said last week that movies will predominate in its programing.

See—Mor also will provide a 24—hour channel providing around the clock weather information and background music.

A 15—section, 300—foot receiving tower will be erected by the end of this week. The tower is two miles north of Sikeston near Tanner Road.

Garrett said that two channels, possibly 9 and 10, are being left available for the use of schools and Sikeston programming.

When all the cable is laid, it will be spliced to above ground support wire and turned on.

Twitty Has Built Strong School With Good Community Support

By JUDY GAZETTE

Chatting with Lynn Twitty was fascinating. Efforts toward reporting his personality and experiences proved to be a day's work.

Superintendent of Sikeston public schools since 1951, Twitty will retire in April and he says, "so some other things." Taking over the job will be Sam Harbin, director of secondary education. Twitty is 61.

From an office chair, Twitty settled in and directed his attention — if hesitantly — to answering questions.

He was born in Washington, Ind., Feb. 17, 1909, the oldest of seven children. They were reared on a farm in a "liberal atmosphere...conducive to learning," as he described it. His father, James Dwight Twitty, a farmer, completed high school, and he recalled, "was a very sensitive person. If we had extra money, he encouraged us to spend it on books instead of candy. My mother was the realistic one in the family — the dominant personality."

By the time he started to school, the family moved to Kewanee and from there to Lilbourn, where he graduated from high school in 1928. He was active in athletics, playing center on the varsity football team. Asked about his high school days, he remarked: "I was fairly good in literature and history....the humanities, but as a math student, I was terrible. I did read a lot, and still do, but to this day, I have no aptitude for mathematics."

In 1934, he earned a bachelor of science degree in social studies and physical education, with a minor in fine arts from Southeast Missouri state college in Cape Girardeau — taking advantage of a football scholarship. He was, admittedly, a politician — elected president of his senior class and captain of the college football team, positions that he held in high school as well.

Later in 1934, as college sweethearts will, Twitty and Miriam Frances Jones of Campbell, married. Making the most of that year, his teaching career began, also — as basketball coach at Kewanee.

"I made so many mistakes during that first term, I could write a book on negative approaches." Twitty laughed. I asked what kind of mistakes. "In discipline.... or motivation. For instance, you can't ridicule a child into learning."

In 1937 he launched into educational administration by taking on responsibilities as principal then as superintendent at Kewanee. By 1942, he had been superintendent at Lilbourn three years and had completed work on a masters degree in educational administration from the University of Missouri at Columbia.

On his office wall hangs a large, detailed marine corps insignia, too prominent to go unnoticed.

As an enlisted private —on military leave-of-absence from Lilbourn schools — he trained at Quantico, Va., served in the Pacific during World War II and was a staff member of the Marine's school at Quantico. After the war, he returned to Lilbourn with the rank of major, served as superintendent until 1951, and went back into active duty during the Korean conflict. It was not suprising that he completed 29 years reserve activity in 1969 and holds a commission as colonel, retired.

Astronauts Hard to Awaken As Apollo Travels Earthward

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Apollo 14 and its cargo of moon treasure plummeted past the halfway mark of its homeward journey today, streaking faster and faster toward a Tuesday splashdown in the Pacific OCEAN.

Alan B. Shepard Jr., Edgar D. Mitchell and Stuart A. Roosa reluctantly awakened after a 10 hour rest, which followed a Sunday night telecast in which they expressed hope the space program might help achieve peace and understanding on earth.

Mission Control said it had considered letting them sleep later because they had only a light schedule on their last full day in space: monitoring systems, making stellar navigation readings and resting for the busy re-entry Tuesday.

"We thought we'd let you keep banker's hours today," capsule communicator Fred W. Haise told Mitchell when he sent the wakeup alarm. "But we can't let you sleep in tomorrow, so we thought we'd get you back on schedule."

Mitchell reported he had to do a little extra shaking to "wake up these other two guys."

While the astronauts slept, their command ship Kitty Hawk zipped past the halfway point of the 238,000 mile trip froo moon to earth and was picking up speed as earth's gravity exerted an ever greater inflaence.

Interest Wanes in Landings

By CHARLES BRADY

Going to the moon is a remarkable achievement for mankind but many Sikestonians don't have the interest in lunar landings and moonwalks they once had.

Telephone calls to homes throughout the city over the weekend disclosed that many residents were not very interested in the space exploration.

Of 50 citizens called in a random survey, only three said they arose at 3 a.m. Friday to view the lunar module Antares settle in the Fra Mauro region of the moon. There was none of the mass marathon viewing of Apollo 14 that accompanied Apollo 11 July 20, 1969 when Neil Armstrong became the first human to walk on the moon.

Although many Sikeston offices, stores, and schools had television sets operating to allow employes, customers, and pupils to watch the drama of the fifth and sixth humans, all Americans to set foot on the alien world, home viewers were noticeably absent.

Only six citizens said they were glued to their television sets.

Ten residents said they had watched some of the moon drama but "weren't very interested" in it because it was "old stuff".

Seven residents admitted they had not watched any of the moon mission and 27 said they had watched it part of the time.

Four residents mentioned that they weren't interested in it at first but "became concerned" and started watching the drama when the lunar module Antares and the command module Kitty Hawk had trouble docking.

"I think they (spacemen) could find something more interesting to do than that (walk on the moon)" one citizen complained. "We need more money here at home instead of spending it for space flights."

"It doesn't matter to me how many times we go to the moon. It's a fantastic thing and kind of makes me proud to be an American," one resident offered.

HOW TO MAKE A MONSTER

Charles Manson and three of his "hippie" followers have been found guilty of first degree murder in the bloody slaughter of seven hapless victims, one of whom was actress Sharon Tate. Thus, "justice has been done" — but the dead can not be brought back, nor can they be spared the horror of their demise. Hopefully, the conviction will deter other would-be criminals. But there is still the nagging question: "Why?" The parents of Sharon Tate - who lost not only a daughter but an unborn grandchild as well - said, at the end of the long trial, thay they were still haunted by the question, "How could anybody do such a terrible thing?"

Theories abound. It was widely reported that Manson "went bad" because he was "cruelly deprived" as a child. But an enterprising reporter, Dave Smith of the Los Angeles Times, found and interviewed the mother of Manson, who, under another name, lives virtually in hiding. And according to her, Manson was a pampered child who got his way in nearly everything. "If Charles wanted anything, I'd give it to him," she told Smith.

True, Manson had been born out of wedlock. True, he had not seen his father after he was four years old. But he was surrounded by an overindulgent family, including his mother, her sister, (his aunt), his uncle and his grandmother.

"If Charles wanted money to go to the pictures, he'd come and get it from me, and then he'd get it from his grandmother and my sister, too." Mrs. Manson told Smith. "He never had to do a thing to earn what he wanted. He didn't even have to to things around the house, like rake leaves or mow lawns ... Until Charles came out to California when he was about 21, he never worked a whole day in his life."

It's an old saying that the Devil finds work for idle hands to do. Hannah More, the great 18th century English writer and philanthropist, wrote that "Idleness among children, as among men, is the root of all evil." There is ample evidence that these wise words of yesterday, scorned by many today, contained far more truth than fiction.

REPUBLIC REPULSED

I tell you this day the Republic has been repulsed. Our laws have been rendered ineffective, our Christian heritage assailed, our educational system corrupted, our patriotism diluted by ridicule and all segments of our society must share some of the blame . . .

It is my opinion that some members of the judicial system have condoned the rape of liberty for the gratification of the individual. That the scales of justice have been tipped by the decisions adjudicating the law in a manner which they would like to see it — instead of what it is.

I firmly believe that society has rights and that individual liberty is secondary to the whole, where there has been due process.

I would remind all that no indiviudal freedom can last except in an orderly society. Can we hope to be freer or more secure in the pursuit of happiness by limiting police powers because of a supposed fear of abuse — while at the same time we are in a greater danger from those criminals that have increased crime nine times faster than the growth of our population — and still others who commit fraud, violence and murder in the name of individual liberty or their sociological beliefs?

We will lose this Republic by the weight of numbers of crimes that go unsolved. The numbers of thefts, rapes, robberies, and frauds untied because we have not provided enough trained police to investigate and apprehend — enough prosecutors to try the cases — enough courts to hear them and, most serious of all, enough citizens who will serve as witnesses or jurors and take up the responsibility of citizenship.

There is no order in a society that permits one citizen to perpetrate crimes against another in the guise of liberty. Nor does law exist where threats, intimidation and assault by person against person is condoned.

The world today changes in seconds instead of centuries. A society that does not progress to insure equality of protection for all its citizens in each facet of its growth condemns itself to destruction.

In order to insure that degree of security each of us would garner unto himself and his posterity, those unto himself and his posterity, those charged to enforce the laws must be so equipped as to capably meet all assaults upon America.

America is under the greatest attack today that she has known in a century. Greater from within, perhaps, than from without . . .

Things are going to get much worse before they get much better unless there is a fast and firm action taken to change thinking today.

This thin blue line — this thin blue line of policemen is all that holds this country together and they are wavering from the assault on the one side and the lack of support on the other. If this line ever breaks this country will be so irretrievably lost that no army will ever restore the freedoms that we now have.

The leftists now say they intend to overthrow our government. They have resorted to violence. They are arming and they are moving from the college campuses to the high schools and grade schools.

There is now an assault to break the ranks of labor via the "work-in" program. Labor says they won't make it. But author Phillip A. Luce says that the United Auto Workers funds have, for years, been used to finance SDS activities.

We know that the use of drugs, sex, alcohol and guilt are being used to enlist the youth of this nation to their cause. If you question this let me tell you that drug offenses have gone up 400 per cent over the last year and that more illegal liquor is being drunk today than during prohibition.

They hook young girls on dope and then prostitute them to get money to fund their campaigns.

Other groups are blackmailing cities for money. They say "give or we march, burn and destroy!"

Governmental programs and funds have been used to finance individuals and whatever causes they are interested in.

They charge police with brutality and, yet, policemen are constantly being assaulted. They are attempting in every way they know how to destroy the police image. They have to in order to achieve their purpose because the police represent law and they cannot operate within the law.

You are not afraid to walk down the street because of police brutality. But why do they want you to think this way? It is Communist propaganda to destroy America.

We have college professors who are teaching un-Americanism in our colleges. We know some who have aided and abetted the leftists by furnishing them advice on how to circumvent the law. They have also furnished money and transportation.

We see some of the same faces showing up at one demonstration after another and yet we hear the riots are spontaneous. We can prove they are not.

We find the bank accounts of student leaders swelled by large cash deposits which cannot be traced.

We have found caches of arms and explosives in large quantities.

Now we have SDS members graduating from colleges and teaching these theories to our first graders.

We have governmental officials and university administrators who are appeasing dissenters and political leaders lending support to radicals.

The irresponsible people of government make such statements as "Elect my candidate and there won't be any police brutality. There won't be any police!"

MEASLES - MUMPS -RUBELLA VACCINE COMBINATION CALLED SUCCESS

Washington, D.C. — In field trials with a combined live virus vaccine against measles, mumps and rubella, protective antibodies were induced against one or more of the three diseases with a single injection in more than 93 per cent of the subjects, it was reported here.

The experimental vaccine was administered in four studies to 715 preschool age children who were previously without antibodies to any of the three viruses.

There was no evident impairment of immune response resulting from interaction of the viruses, Maurice R. Hilleman, Ph.D., of the Merck Institute for Therapeutic Research, West Point, Pennsylvania, told an International Conference on the Application of Vaccines Against Viral Rickettsial, and Bacterial Disease of Man, sponsored jointly by the Pan American Health Organization and the World Health Organization.

The clinical studies with the combined vaccine, which Dr. Hilleman developed with Eugene B. Buynak, Ph. D., also of Merck, were carried out in collaboration with Drs. Joseph Stokes, Jr., and Robert E. Weibel, both of the Universtiy of Pennsylvania, and Drs. Victor M. Villarejos, Jorge A. Arguedas - Gamboa and Gilberto Vargas, all of the International Center for Medical Research and Training, Louisiana State University, San Jose, Costa Rica.

According to Dr. Hilleman, the mild fevers occasionally observed following the administration of the three -in -one vaccine were no greater than when measles vaccine was administered alone.

Of the 715 children in the studies, 684 (95.7 per cent) developed antibodies against measles, 680 (95.1 per cent) against mumps, and 670 (93.7 per cent) against rubella.

The combined vaccine, Dr. Hilleman explained, consists of the Jeryl Lynn strain mumps vaccine, the Moraten (more attenuated) measles strain, and the HPV-77 rubella virus strain prepared in duck embryo tissue. All three are in use separately.

Dr. Hilleman also reported favorable results with other vaccine combinations, including single - injection vaccines against mumps - rubella, measles - rubella, and measles - smallpox. He said findings to date have demonstrated the feasibility and utility of the combined - vaccine approach for routine application.

In addition to speeding up public health immunization programs in the United States, he observed that combined vaccines would be of particular value in the developing nations, where acute shortages of medical personnel exist.

A BRIGHT FUTURE BEGAN IN A CAB

Dick Osk, an editor with Sales Management Magazine, asked Bob Ix, the president of Schweppes, for an interview. Ix promised to pick him up at the railroad station in Stamford, Conn. The train was 12 minutes late and when the editor arrived he found Ix's car but no president.

A few minutes later, Ix emerged from a nearby liquor store. He said, "When they told me that the train would be late, I called on the liquor dealer across the street and sold him an order for our new mixes."

This was quite typical. When he was an undergraduate at the Universtiy of Pennsylvania, Bob Ix learned that a VP from Arthur D. Little, Inc., was coming fr m Cambridge, Miass., to interview prospective graduates. Ix, a Marketing major, wanted a job with the management consulting firm and tried to get an appointment but was told that only graduating engineers were being interviewed.

Sales Management continues: Focusing on the opportunity rather than the problem, as is his wont, Ix figured a way to get his interview. At 5:30 p.m. when Coveney finally emerged from his engineer interviews and was hurrying out of the building, Ix approached him.

Ix reports, "Coveny said he was sorry that he couldn't talk, that he had to find a cab and rush to the airport. It's tough to get a cab in Philadelphia at that hour so I had one waiting for him. He interviewed me on the way to the plane and by the time he boarded it, I had an invitation to Cambridge." (He got the job.)

LEADED GASOLINE FIGHTS ITS CRITICS

The automobile industry is urging the petroleum industry to get the lead out — literatlly — to help clean up the nati n's air. The lead is tetraethyl lead, which has been used in gasoline since its antiknock qualities were discovered by chemist Thomas Midgley Jr. in 1921.

The petroleum people say they will be happy to supply unleaded gasoline anytime Detroit mass - produces engines that can use it. The automakers say they will start building the engines as soon as the oil men give them the specifications of the fuel.

Now a third interested party has gotten into the act.

J. L. KImberley, executive vice president of the Lead Industries Association, claims that no studies have shown any health hazard to the public from the lead in gasoline. Not only that, we don't know what health hazards might result from widespread use of unleaded gasoline, he says.

He cites a recent U.S. Department of Interior research report which found that pollution effects increased by as much as 25 per cent when gasoline was changed from leaded to unleaded, even though total emissions were about the same.

Better, he says, to concentrate on perfecting emission -control devices that will reduce auto exhaust pollution particles of all kinds, including lead.

However, the reason the automakers would like to see lead go is because it ahs a corrosive effect on new antipolluton devices, such as catalytic mufflers.

Tetraethyl lead, or its chemical companion tetramethyl laed, are added to about 97 out of every 100 gallons of gasoline produced. It takes only about one teaspoon per gallon

Without the use of antiknocks, at least 11 gallons of gasoline would be required to do the work of 10 gallons of unleaded fuel. This translates into a saving of almost 200 million barrels of crude oil a year in the United States alone.

It is estimated that the more complex refining processes needed to produce an efficient, high - octane, lead - free gas would raise the price of gasoline several cents a gallon. Also, modification of older cars to use the new fuel would be costly to the individual car owner.

Nevertheless, the lead -must -go bandwagon is gathering momentum, but whether it will take us all to a happy destination is something less than certain.

TOO MANY TRUCKS IN THAILAND

Examples of misspent and misused foreign aid never seem to end. Senator Stuart Symington now has found that large numbers of trucks, trailers and tractors, supplied by the United States to Thailand, are sitting in open fields "engulfed in weeds."

Ammunition, also sent by our country, is being stored in the open without protection or security.

This came to light after the General Accounting Office (GAO) looked into the $260 million in aid the United States has given Thailand.

It found, among other things, that the United States had been sending equipment and vehicles to equip a Thai division under the assumption it was the same size as an American division. But in reality a Thai division has less than half the number of men of a United States division.

Meanwhile all those extra trucks, tractors and trailers are decorating the Thai landscape.

H.L. Hunt Says

FOREIGN "AID" HURTS RECIPIENT, TOO

Concerned citizens enthusiastic for the Constructive viewpoint in international affairs have long maintained that so-called economic aid to backward nations, paid for by U.S. taxpayers through various U.S. and international agencies, actually hurt almost everybody and helped very few. Capital investment in suitable enterprises is what all developing economies need, not "welfare" from U.S. taxpayers. India provides a prime example.

This view is beginning to take hold in Congress, too, now that enough voters back home have heeded the advice of seasoned campaigners for the Truth-side and started writing to influence their Senators and Representatives through effective means such as the letters-to-the-editor columns in their weekly and daily newspaper and other periodicals.

Pressure from voters has begun to make some liberals take a better look at the facts of economic "aid" and actually see the blunders which Constructive observers have been citing all along. Not only does the government "aid" wind up too often in the wrong hands among bureaucrats and political party leaders, usually socialistic at that, in the developing nation, the "aid" more often than not prevents the local citizens from solving their problem.

Needed reform never is completed so long as Uncle Sam will pick up the bill for the silly socialistic blunders and the backward nation falls farther behind, instead of building and investing and creating to solve its problems. A study of the harm U.S. aid has done to India should provide needed lessons when the new foreign aid bills come up in Congress. HLH

You are more likely to get a cold if you work in an office than a factory. The average worker loses froo three to four days a year because of colds. Only six per cent escape at least one attack of the sniffles durinv that period.

Venetian noblemen once vied so hard to see which could make the trappings of his gondolas the most magnificent and colorful that in 1562 a derree was issued: "Henceforth one color for all." That is why to this day the picturesque water craft that ply the canals of Venice are all painted a somber black.

You wouldn't think any patriotic American would litter a historic site such as the Washington Monument, would you? But workmen who clean it daily sweep up about 40 gallons of debris, most of it thrown away by tourists.

The chances are that you'll take 1.7 trips away from home this year, and nine to one that you'll go by car. About 77 per cent of travelers go by car, and 63 per cent of them journey at least 199 miles from home, and 47 per cent spend from two to five nights away.

Quotable notables: "Any fool can tell the truth, but it requires a man of some sense to lie well."

The Stronger Sex: Older women seem to have a greater desire for independence and freedom than older men. At least three times as many women live alone or with nonrelatives as do older men.

The Good Old Days: Inflation has always been with us. For example, there was widespread indignation and predictions of financial disaster when some barber shops--or tonsorial salons, as they were called--raised the price of standard nickel shave to six cents and upped the dime haircut to 12 cents. That was in 1860.

Sobering statistic: Alcohol is now regarded by medical authorities as either the third or fourth chief killer in our society. They attribute more deaths only to heart disease, cancer, and perhaps strokes. For years many experts have though it to be a factor in half the nation's fatal highway accidents.

It was John Dewey who observed, "A man who prides himself upon acting upon principle is likely to be a man who insists upon having his own way without learning from experience what is the better way."

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON--President Nixon has been doing some tall talking to sell his razzle-dazzle budget, with its now-yo-see--it--now-you-don't $11.6 billion deficit, to Republican conservatives.

Down through the long years of Democratic spending, they have howled for a blanced budget. Now their own President is asking them to support a "full-employment budget" with a whopping deficit written in disappearing red ink.

The deficit is supposed to disappear, that is, if there is full employment. But the only way to achieve full employment, he explained, is to start spending money as if full employment were already here. To skeptical conservatives, this sounds like the kind of Democratic double-talk they have doubted in the past.

Only a year ago, President Nixon told the nation: "We must balance our federal budget so that American families will have a better chance to balance their family budgets." Yet his 1971-72 budget, unless there is a dramatic opening up of jobs, will wind up with a massive, $30,2 billion deficit.

The President called Republican congressional leaders into the backrooms of the White House to explain his new deficit-spending philosophy. The discussion was meant for GOP ears only. However, we can report the highlights.

"We cannot get full employment without an expansionary budget," insisted the President. He said his aim was "to have a prosperous economy with full employment."

NIXON QUESTIONED

Colorado's Peter Dominick, the new Senate Republican campaign chairman , asked how they should answer businessmen who complain about inflation and interest rates.

The President noted that interest rates are going down and suggested that his expansionary budget would help. "What really matters is what happens, he said. "Does it work? We believe it will."

Michigan's Robert Griffin, the assistant Senate GOP leader, congratulated the President for speaking out against the recent steel price increase. "What you said to steel was very helpful," said Griffin.

"With oil as well," replied Nixon, "we had to state our views. We didn't bullrag anybody, but we were firm."

"Unemployment will come down," Shultz added confidently. But most economists expect unemployment, now at the highest level in nine years, to rise still higher before it starts to decline.

Later, the President sent Shultz up to Capitol Hill to give all Republican Senators a budget briefing behind closed doors.He ran into a buzzsaw of questiong from such crusty conservatives as Colorado's Sen. Gordon Allott, Delaware's Sen. Galeb Boggs, Nebraska's Sen. Carl Curtis, and Arizona's Sen. Paul Fannin. Essentially, they wanted to know how they could justify a huge deficit after preaching a balanced budget for years.

WASHINGTON WHIRL

FILIBUSTER FLAP--Senate Republican leaders are seeking delicately to get the President to speak to the Vice President about the Senate filibuster. President Nixon has indicated privately that he favors changing the Sentate rules to make it easier to shut off filibusters. At the end of the last session, he told Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield amiably at a White House meeting: "Your performance sure looks like you need a change in rules up there, Mike." But the word has leaked out of Vice President Agnew's office that he opposes a rules change. He has declined, meanwhile, to tell Senate GOP leaders how he would rule in the filibuster controversy. They, therefore, have quietly asked White House aides to get the President to speak to Agnew.

SNOW JOB--William "Fishbait" Miller, the official House doorkeeper, is a dedicated fellow who does more than guard the door. For years, Fishbait has stood while the Speaker and Majority Leader held their daily five-minute news conference before the House convenes at noon. When the noon hour arrives and the two leaders head for the House floor, there is always a brief ceremonial pause while Fishbait brushes the dandruff off their shoulders. "He has been doing that for years," said one House official. "It's not so bad with Carl Albert and Hale Boggs. But when (John) McCormack was Speaker, Fishbait had to use both hands to remove all the dandruff."

USEFUL POLLUTION--William Ruckelshaus, the Nixon Administration's chief environmentalist, has been quickly urging industry to find a way to turn pollution into constructive use. He has pointed out, for example, that sewage can be diverted to farm land to nourish the soil. The U.S., with only 5 per cent of the world's population, uses 30 per cent of the world's resources and produces 50 percent of the world's pollution. Ruckelshaus is calling upon the great corporations to help solve the problems. He has asked them to study how industrial emissions, which now befoul the air and water, might somehow be channeled and used to benefit mankind.

TERROR HITS TEACHERS: Blood Flows As Extremists' Flying Squads Slug Way Towards Control of Education.

Newark, N. J.: — First it must be said there is far more to this story than cracked skulls, blood on the concrete paths of this asphalt jungle, school teachers now bruised from a swift beating, a pervasive gnawing fright, a burned-out car, and an eroding community spirit of men who did believe they could revive this rotting, racket-ridden city.

The bare facts are that a paramilitary band of young black men, some 19, others older, some 25 years of age, surrounded and kicked, clubbed and struck 15 school teachers at about 7:30 a.m., Feb. 2. Sticks, brass knuckles and even a fire extinguisher were used before the slick hit ended and the attackers sped off on foot and in cars.

There you have the bare bones of "the incident." But the story is far more significant than a "hit" on some striking members of the Newark Teachers Union.

There were black as well as white instructors in the assaulted group. All of them belong to a 4,000-member union which runs from 60 to 70 per cent black. Practically all of their union leadership is black. Some of them are of the New Left. You couldn't really get into an argument over Stalin or Mao in the union's hierarchy. They are militant.

This strike followed an earlier one during which their national leader, Dave Selden, president of the American Federation of Teachers, came to their aid and went to prison for 45 days for his efforts. Mr. Seldon is white.

The city's Board of Education is almost as militant. One of the militants' heroes is playwright, author, LeRoi Jones. There is no doubt of the board members' devotion to the black cause. You can see it in some of their salutes. Mr. Jones has been greeted by clenched fist across the heart and straight-arm, palm upstretched salutes.

This city's mayor, Kenneth Gibson, appears to be the best-known of black leaders. He, too, is close to LeRoi Jones, a very devout chap these days, known sometimes as Imamu (in Swahili, the Spiritual Leader) or as Ameer Baraka, an adopted Arabic name.

So the issue is not racial. The issue is jobs. And control of the education of tens of thousands of children. And community control.

The young men who moved in quick formation, slugging women as well as men brutally with laughing disdain for all in the group of teachers who merely were standing around rapping, deliberately adopted a military mien. They wore dungaarees and army fatigue jackets.

There are other such squads. Some are known as the enforcers. They move quickly. They make a profession of frightening folks. They operate at mass meetings. They want a piece of the action. And they get it.

Yet the famed Mayor Gibson, who defeated one of the sleaziest band of men ever to rule any city, has not been very vocal. That's an understatement. He has been silent and this has angered the teachers union national leaders.

"I think it is lamentable," says Dave Selden, "that the mayor of Newark did not offer one word of condemnation in this attack. Nor have we heard much from his police department. We have offered a $5,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the brutal assailants. But the mayor is silent. Why?

Mr. Selden avers that "black extemists" want to drive out the union and seize control of the city's educational system. Mr. Selden says the friction is the result of "the kind of incitement which Gibson, Jones and others have been engaging in ..."

There is no apparent link between the paramilitary squad which roughed up the teachers and LeRoi Jones' Black Community Development and Defense Organization. This has been described as "composed of approximately 100 men including an elite military-like corps called the Simbas and 50 women 'dedicated to the creation of a new value system for the Afro-American Community'."

Most national teachers union leaders, along with Mr. Selden, see writer Jones as "gung-ho" over dominating the educational system. Mr. Jones is the dominant personality in an umbrella organization called the Committee For a Unified Newark, at 502 High Street here. In it are such units as the United Brothers of Newark. They all are deep in the educational system -- from the Board of Education on down to some local schools.

Mr. Selden believes Mr. Jones and friends want to drive the teachers union out of town and out of business. If true, there will be an awful grinding noise. Of course, aid will come from across the river where the United Federation of Teachers is 70,000 strong under the leadership of Al Shanker, a veteran at 40 years of many such battles.

Since the issue appears to be the dumping of the union, the rest of the labor movement is flexing some muscle. And in New Jersey they have it -- all the way from the Teamsters Joint Council to the building trades and the United Auto Workers.

It would be a pity -- and pitiful -- if there is no resort to reason. Paramilitarism, flying squads, weird salutes have nothing to do with self-determination. They are the result of confused permissiveness.

Slugging women isn't self expresson. It's a power grab. If it becomes a way of life -- by any other name -- it will exploit those desperately seeking a better life.

The show, which astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr. closed with a plea for peace on earth, was not carried live on the television networks. Portions of it were included in news telecasts.

Shepard's wife, Louise, joined Stuart A. Roosa's wife, Joan, and Edgar Mitchell's wife, Louise, for lunch Sunday after church. It was their first social get-together of the moon flight.

MOBERLY, MO. (AP) — What would be the telephone operator's reaction if you asked her to place a long distance, person-to-person call to Astronaut Alan Sheperd - on the moon?

Radio station KWIX of Moberly tried a number of times.

One operator said:

"The moon? Really; Do you have a number and area code?"

Another, who took it in stride, said, "All right."

The newsman asked how long it would take and she said she didn't know. He said he would wait, but was discouraged when the condesencing operator replied, "O.K."

Many operators laughed, but one ended the fun with the stern rejoinder:

"Sir, there are no connections for civilians to the moon at this time. We are sorry."

When putting furniture oil on a dust mop, try pouring the oil in a sprinkler and sprinkling it on. When oiled this way, the mop will be able to take up the dust without leaving grease smudges.

In Defense of Women

by H. L. Mencken

HOW MARRIAGES ARE ARRANGED

I have said that women are not sentimental, i.e., not prone to permit mere emotion and illusion to corrupt their estimation of a situation. The doctrine, perhaps, will raise a protest. The theory that they are is itself a favorite sentimentality, one sentimentality will be brought up to substantiate another; dog will eat dog. But an appeal to a few obvious facts will be enough to sustain my contention, despite the vast accumulation of romantic rubbish to the contrary.

Turn, for example, to the field in which the two sexes come most constantly into conflict, and in which, as a result, their habits of mind are most clearly contrasted - to the field, to wit, of monogamous marriage. Surely no long argument is needed to demonstrate the superior competence and effectiveness of women here, and therewith their greater self-possession, their saner weighing of considerations, their higher power of resisting emotional suggestion. The very fact that marriages occur at all is a proof, indeed, that they are more cool-headed then men, and more adept in employing their intellectual resources, for it is plainly to a woman's interest to make a favourable marriage as soon as she can. The efforts of the two sexes are thus directed, in one of the capital concerns of life, to diametrically antagonistic ends. Which side commonly prevails? I leave the verdict to the jury. All normal men fight the thing off; some men are successful for relatively long periods; a few extraordinarily intelligent and courageous men (or perhaps lucky ones) escape altogether. But, taking one generation with another, as every one knows, the average man is duly married and the average woman gets a husband. Thus the great majority of women, in this clear-cut and endless conflict, make manifest their substantial superiority to the great majority of men.

Not many men, worthy of the name, gain anything of net value by marriage, at least as the institution is now met with in Christendom. Even assessing its benefits at their most inflated worth, they are plainly overborne by crushing disadvantages. When a man marries it is no more than a sign that the feminine talent for persuasion and intimidation — i.e., the feminine talent for survival in a world of clashing concepts and desires, the feminine competence and intelligence — has forced him into a more or less abhorrent compromise with his own honest inclinations and best interests. Whether that compromise be a sign of his relative stupidity or of his relative cowardice it is all one: the two things, in their symptonms and effects, are almost identical. In the first case he marries because he has been clearly bowled over in a combat of wits; in the second he resigns himself to marriage as the safest form of liaison. In both cases his inherent sentimentality is the chief weapon in the hand of his opponent. It makes him cherish the fiction of his enterprise, and even of his daring, in the midst of the most crude and obvious operations against him. It makes him accept as real the bold play-acting that women always excel at, and at no time more than when stalking a man. It makes him, above all, see a glamour of romance in a transaction which, even at its best, contains almost as much gross trafficking, at bottom, as the sale of a mule.

A man in full possession of the modest faculties that nature commonly apportions to him is at least far enough above idiocy to realize that marriage is a bargain in which he gets the worse of it, even when, in some detail or other, he makes a visible gain. He never, I believe, wants all the thing offers and implies. He wants, at most, no more than certain parts. He may desire, let us say, a housekeeper to protedt his goods and entertain his friends — but he may shrink from the thought of sharing his bathtub with any one, and home cooking may be downright poisonous to him. He may yearn for a son to pray at his tomb — and yet suffer acutely at the mere approach of relatives-in-law. He may dream of a beautiful and complaisant mistress, less exigent and mercurial than any a bachelor may hope to discover - and stand aghast at admitting her to his bank-book, his family-tree and his secret ambitions. He may want a company and not intimacy, or intimacy and not company. He may want a cook and not a partner in his business, or a partner in his business and not a cook. But in order to get the precise thing or things that he wants, he has to take a lot of other things that he doesn't want — that no sane man, in truth, could imaginably want — and it is to the enterprise of forcing him into this almost Armenian bargain that the woman of his "choice" addresses herself. Once the game is fairly set, she searches out his weaknesses with the utmost delicacy and accuracy, and plays upon them with all her superior resources. He carries a handicap from the start. His sentimental and unintelligent belief in theories that she knows quite well are not true — e. g., the theory that she shrinks from him, and is modestly appalled by the banal carnalities of marriage itself- gives her a weapon against him which she drives home with instinctive and compelling art. The moment she discerns this sentimentality bubbling within him — that is, the moment his oafish smirks and eye-rollings signify that he has achieved the intellectual disaster that is called falling in love — he is hers to do with as she will. Save for acts of God, he is forthwith as good as married.

super pizza loaf

One Dish Meal

This recipe tested and tasted in a Sikeston kitchen.

You're a pizza lover? Then why not try our undercover version for a change. It's a super supper or party idea — and not too costly or too difficult to prepare.

We've combined brown ground beef with favorite pizza seasonings and ingredients — oregano, garlic salt, onion, rich thick tomato paste and mushroom pieces. The tomato paste provides lively natural tomato taste, good consistency and full—bodied flavor.

Now you're ready to wrap up the works in a dough rectangle made from a package of hot roll mix. Before doing so though, sprinkle the beef mixture with lots of good cheese — either Mozzarella or Jack. Creating the fancy look of the loaf is simple — just cut the dough into diagonal strips on each side of the meat, then crisscross the strips over the top. For the attractive finishing touch, brush the loaf with beaten egg and sprinkle with poppy seeds. Half an hour in a hot oven and it's ready to take to the table.

For supper we suggest completing the meal with a hearty vegetable soup and fruit of your choice. A warming menu idea for a blustery winter evening.

SUPER PIZZA WRAP—UP

1½ pounds ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
1 (4-ounce) can mushroom stems & pieces, drained
1 (6-ounce) can tomato paste
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon oregano
½ teaspoon garlic salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 (13-¾-ounce) package hot roll mix
1 cup shredded Mozzarella or Jack cheese
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon poppy seeds

Cook beef, onion and mushrooms in large skillet until meat browns, drain fat. Stir in tomato paste, flour, oregano, garlic salt and pepper; cook 5 minutes. Cool 10 minutes. Meanwhile, prepare hot roll mix according to package directions, except do not let dough rise. On lightly floured board, roll dough to 14-inch square; place on greased cookie sheet. Spoon meat mixture down center of dough to within 2 inches of both ends. Shape meat into loaf; sprinkle with cheese. Cut 6 diagonal strips of dough 2 inches wide on each side of meat. Fold dough ends over meat; then criss- cross strips over top. Brush top of dough with egg; sprinkle with poppy seeds. Bake at 400 degrees 30 minutes. Slice to serve. Makes 6 servings.

Governor's Lady: Alabama's Cornelia

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Mrs. George C. Wallace, the vivacious, dark-eyed brunette who is Alabama's new first lady, says the governor wooed her with "that old-time kind of courting."

"It was last spring when he first started courting," said Cornelia Wallace, 32, who married the 51-year-old Wallace, widower and the father of four, two weeks before his inauguration Jan. 18.

"He came to the house with his children but we didn't go out much. Frankly, neither of us wanted to be exposed to all the publicity.

"His children were promoting us. He was very depressed after Lurleen's death and they were worried about him," she said. "They had a lot to do with us getting married."

Mrs. Wallace, smartly clad in a grey wool dress and high black boots, spoke warmly in an interview of the governor's first wife, Lurleen, who died May 8, 1968, after a two-year bout with cancer.

Lurleen succeeded Wallace as governor when his first term expired in January 1967 and became the first woman in Alabama and the third in the nation to head a state government.

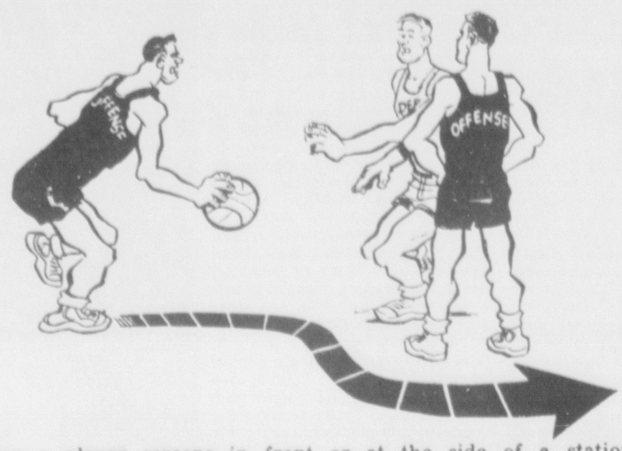
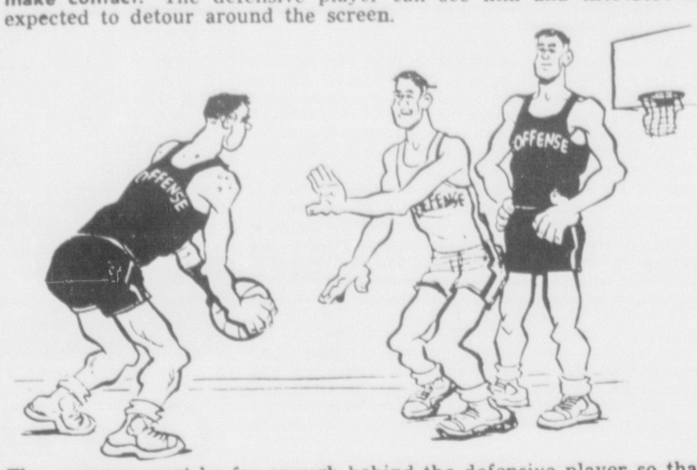
BASKETBALL RULES
Simplified and Illustrated

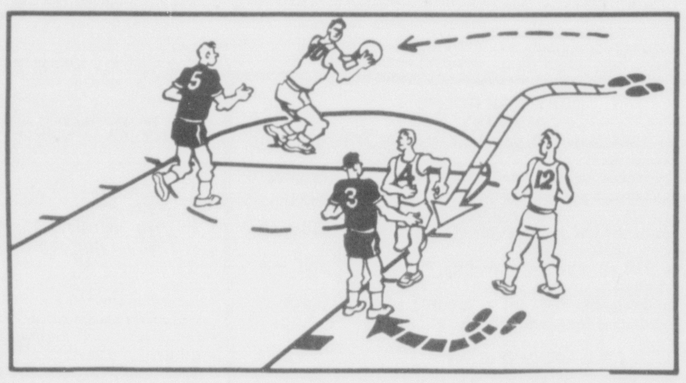


When a player screens in front or at the side of a stationary opponent, he may be as close as he desires providing he does not make contact. The defensive player can see him and therefore is expected to detour around the screen.



The screener must be far enough behind the defensive player so that the defensive player may take a normal step backward.
When a stationary player is screened from behind, he must be able to take a normal step backward without contact, because the player being screened is not expected to see a screen behind him. Therefore, a player screened from behind is given additional protection by the rules.

Example A shows No. 10 setting a legal screen behind No. 3. No. 3 turns around and has plenty of room to change directions but he contacts No. 10 in example B. If No. 3 would stop now, nothing has happened because the contact has been slight and has not put anybody to disadvantage, but in example C No. 3 decided to keep right on going through the screener and now a foul has to be called on No. 3.



No. 3 has established a legal position. No. 4 if he were looking where he is going would have an opportunity to stop or change directions. If he continues on and runs over the top of No. 3, the foul will be charging on No. 4.

Defense Key in JV Win

ESSEX——The surprising Sikeston Bulldog B-team slipped up on the unsuspecting junior Richland Rebels in a Saturday night cage tilt to overpower the host 63—55. The Richland JV squad just a week ago captured the Stoddard County JV tourney with a smashing victory over the Bell City Cubs, but evidently the JV Bulldogs must not have heard of how tough the Rebels were, as the JV team from Sikeston just outplayed the Richland quintet to take home a deserved victory.

Sikeston led from the opening tip, and were never seriously threatened until late in the game. At half—time intermission the Bulldogs led 31 to 21, and thinking they had the game came out in the third quarter perhaps a bit too sure of themselves and were jumped on by the Rebels and outscored to tie the game 39 to 39 at the close of the third quarter. In the final period the JV Bulldogs meant business and unleashed an offensive effort that netted them 24 points while their defensive tactics held the Rebel squad to 16. The defensive effort of the Sikeston team is not to go unheraled because they checked the Richland "ace", Robert Jones, to four points and only six rebounds, this big man has been averaging in the high double figures in both departments.

Brown Leads Comeback

ESSEX——Ronald Brown came off the bench to spark Richland to a 69—66 victory over Sikeston Saturday night, scoring six points in a big 20 point fourth quarter.

Brown sank two free throws in the last 29 seconds of regulation play to give the Rebels a little breathing space after a pair of steals by the 5—10 cager paved the way for the come back.

As usual when these two powerful clubs meet there are great team efforts and consistent individual performances, and Saturday night was no exception as the Sikeston duo of Lee King and Sam Tucker butted heads with the Sims brothers John and Dennis from Richland.

Right from the opening tip everyone in the gymnasium realized that the contest was going to go right down to the final gun, and it did. Both squads put every ounce of energy they had on the outcome of the contest, Sikeston was wanting to pull another upset like the one they had pulled over Dexter Friday night, and the Richland Rebels were wanting to get back on the winning track after being smashed by Charleston in their Tuesday night clash. The degree of the tension on the players showed in their field goal percentage in the first half as countless shots by both squads caroomed off the backboards.

The Sikeston quintet raced to a 14 to 10 lead at the close of the first quarter of play. It was in the second quarter that the Richland five made their move and move they did, slowly whittling down the Sikeston lead until they trailed by only one point, 30 to 29 at half time.

Whatever Coach Joplin told the Richland cagers must have worked because the Rebels kept firing away and found themselves on top of the game at the close of the third quarter by one point, 49—48.

What led to the downfall of the Sikeston cagers was the defense that Dennis Sims threw at Lee King in the fourth quarter. Going into the final period of play King had 23 points and he was the key to the Bulldog offense. Dennis Sims held the Sikeston ace to only two points in the final quarter. In the last 29 seconds of play Brown's two freethrows insured the victory.

Leading the scoring for the Rebels were the Sims brothers, with Johnny netting 19 and Dennis pouring in 17 points. Hot shooting Norman Cole was checked for only five points in the contest, far below his season average. The Bulldog barrage was paced by Lee King's 25 andSam Tucker's 15 points.

TRJC Bows In Finals

F L A T RIVER——Three Rivers junior college of Poplar Bluff failed in their bid as repeat champions of the Mineral Area invitational tournament Saturday night, losing to the host 82—74.

The Raiders moved into the finals behind a 95—77 win over Jefferson Friday night. TRJC won its opener, 95—65, from Olney, Ill.

Larry Lawrence poured in 26 points and Roy Fields added 19 to head the semi—final triumph.

Fouls, 34 of them, led to the Raiders defeat as TRJC out-scored the host 28—24 from the field but suffered a 34—18 beating at the line.

All this came despite the return of Roy Fields and John Johnson to the Raiders lineup. The pair sat out the first half of the season.

The game was tied 40—40 at the half, but as the fouls mounted the reserves had to play most of the second half and fell eight points short as the Raiders record dipped to 13—8.

Frosty Copenhaver and Dennis Hobbs pumped in 21 points apiece to head the MA offense, which included five other players with points.

Roy Fields headed the Raiders offense with 13 points. Fred Johnson added 12 and Larry Lawrence 10 to round out the double figure scoring.

Copenhaver was named the tournament's most outstanding player, an award won by Fred Johnson last season when the Raiders claimed the title.

TRJC plays at Helena, Ark. tonight against Phillips County JC.

Bearcats Win 14th

DEXTER——A pressuring man-to-man defense and some accurate shooting lifted Coach Jim Hall's Dexter high Bearcats to its 14th win of the season Saturday night, beating Jackson 72—48.

The Bearcat defense pressured the Indians into numerous floor mistakes, which the Cats capitalized on to race to a 27—7 first quarter lead and never was headed.

Dexter shot 59 per cent from the field in the first half, netting 20 of 34 field tries, as it rang up a 46—16 halftime edge.

Jackson salvaged a split as its B-team started the evenings action with a victory.

SIKESTON CITY DUMP, and offender in the solid waste pollution problem, is a situation the town as a whole can resolve. The city council and other administrators cannot solve the problem, however, without the backing and support of the townspeople. YOU can help!

The Sordid Solids

Solid waste means rubbish and garbage — newspapers, beer cans, broken glass, plastic bottles, ham bones, grass cuttings, old mattresses, junked cars — all the things we throw away. Disposal means picking them up, transporting them to their final destination, and then burning, burying, or otherwise treating them.

We Americans generate a staggering amount of solid waste. Our daily throw-away average is now more than five pounds for each man, woman, and child. (And when industrial and demolition wastes are included, the daily average per person becomes ten pounds instead of 5.30. Someone has calculated that if New York City's domestic garbage was heaped in Yankee Staduim, it would make a mile-high mountain within a year.

Solid waste disposal is the government's third most expensive service, coming right after highways and schools. In New York it costs thirty cents to pick up a littered bottle from the roadside, and it costs more to dispose of the Sunday New York Times than to buy it.

Collecting methods haven't changed in a century. Noisy trucks go from door to door, are loaded inefficiently by high-cost labor, and then driven to a discharge area which is located as far away as possible. Collecting incidentally, is so profitable that in many places where it is handled by private contractors the Mafia have been in charge for years.

The favorite American method of treatment is old-fashioned dumping because it is cheap. An open dump handles the stuff for $1 to $3 per ton; a well-run dump costs about fifty cents more a ton. So we have some 12,000 dumps used by collection services and — either through ignorance or to save that fifty cents a ton — more than 11,000 of them are so poorly managed that they present a constant threat of disease, land blight, and air and water pollution.

Dumps account for about 90 per cent of the disposal; incinerators take care of the rest. Incinerators sound more progressive, but the fact is, almost half are so antiquated that they will soon have to be replaced and seven out of ten lack adequate air-pollution control devices.

This slovenly, outdated, air-and water polluting national garbage disposal plant of ours, which can barely deal with today's rubbish, now faces alarming new problems. Among them:

The amount of rubbish is increasing more than twice as fast as the population. It has gone up 60 per cent since 1950, and is expected to triple between now and 1980. The packaging industry keeps on adding layers of paper, and individuals buy more things and throw them out sooner.

"Throwaway" products from hypodermics and diapers to furniture are proliferating. Because the old softdrink bottles made 24 round trips to the factory, anti-litter interest introduced laws against non-returnable bottles in legislatures last year. All were unsuccessful.

Many new materials are nondegradable — nature can't cope with them. Tin cans rusted eventually, but aluminum cans and plastic bottles are immortal.

Nearly all cities and many suburbs are running out of convenient dumping sites. In desperation they are turning to estuaries, marshes, and flood plains where the damage they do is irreversible.

New Ways to Deal with Waste

The new methods of wast management vary widely because no two communities have the same problems and no single technique will work everywhere. But they all have one thing in common: they get vlaue from waste.

Ann Landers

Answering Intimate Questions Publicly

Dear Ann Landers: I wouldn't believe this if it hand't happened to me. The other evening my husband and I took our two young sons out to dinner. We were enjoying ourselves when suddenly a loud-mouth walked over to our table and said,"My wife and I have a bet. I say those two boys are adopted. My wife says they aren't." My husband and I were stunned. The man continued, "I'm sure I win the bet because you two are both dark complected and black-haired and the kids are fair."

I was so taken by surprise I didn't know what to say. I replied,"The boys are not adopted. They resemble my side of the family. I am the only brunet."

When the man left, the boys began to ask questions. My husband was furious. He said I should have told the slob it was none of his business. Although my husband is probably right. I feel that had I refused to answer his question the boys might have got the impressions that perhaps they WERE adopted. Please give us your opinoin. ----H.T.

Dear H.T.: Sorry, I'm with your husband. Strangers who ask intimate questions don't deserve a civil reply. After the man left you couldthen have pointed out to the boys what a rude question it was and explained that it is not unusual for two dark parents to have light complexioned, blond children, and vice versa.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently, a dearly loved, much admired and respected man died. He was an ideal husband and father, a community leader, financially successful and the sort of person everyone looked up to. After his death his wife and adult children went through his personal belongings -- together. What they found was shattering and heartbreaking. They discovered a collection of pornographic magazines and books, stacks of obscene pictures and a suitcase filled with stag movies.

The family is crushed. They now feel his life was a sham -- that he was a hypocrite. No one can understand it. How could a person have kept his true charactere so completely hidden from those who were so close to him? A prurient interest in sex is as unlike this man as night is from day. Please explain. ---Stunned in Connecticut

Dear Stunned: It is not unusual for a person to have a private, kooky, compartment in his life -- ranging from the slightly offbeat to the wildly bizarre. This needn't mean the person was evil or sinister. It merely means that in this particular area he had a strudel in his noodle.

Dear Ann Landers: My cousin and I married brothers of European background. Our in-laws have been in this country for over 20 years. They speak good English when they want to, but they don't want to when my cousin and I are around.

Last night my husband was saying something to me in English. My father-in-law interruped in their native tongue. My husband then responded in there native language and I couldn't understand one single word after that. I'm sure his dad told him to stop talking English.

My cousin and I have had several arguments with our husbands about this. We feel they should have enough respect for us to tell their parents to speak English in our presence. Our husbands refuse to do it. What's the answer? ----Tower of Babel

Dear Babs: You and your cousin should have long since learned some words in your in-laws native tongue. It would have demonstrated a desire to be a bonafide members of the tribe. And it would have endeared you to them permanently. Get your husbands to teach you some words and phrases. Try them out on the in-laws soon. It will improve the relationships immensely.

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits -- the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-Age Sex -- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Industry Rejects Bootheel Location Because of Problems

NEW MADRID, — Severe labor problems at the Noranda Aluminum Inc. construction site were partially responsible for causing the Scott Paper Company to reject Missouri's Bootheel as a site for a $200 million plant, a company source said Thursday.

Scott's choice for expansion in the Midwest had narrowed to two sites — one near Caruthersville and the other 35 miles to the south near Blytheville, Ark.

Before shelving expansion plans until the nation's economy picks up again, however, Scott had crossed Caruthersville off the list.

A company source said one reason was problems experienced at the St. Jude Industrial Park where the aluminum plant and adjacent generating plant are being built.

Union featherbedding, jurisdictional disputes and inflation have been blamed for boosting costs of the project by $93 million, an increase of 51 per cent above the original estimate of $183.6 million.

Other factors in Scott's decision, the source said, were the availability of labor, wage levels and tax structures. He declined to indicate which factor played the biggest role in the decision.

The Scott expansion would have meant an eventual 1,000 production jobs for the depressed Bootheel area, which is desperately looking for new industry to stem a population decrease.

With a paper mill and manufacturing and distribution facilities, the expansion over an eight to ten year period would have cost about $200 million.

Scott still holds options on property near Blytheville, although the source said a location decision still has not been made.

That Caruthersville was being considered as a site by Scott had been announced by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

Hearnes, who played a leading role in persuading Noranda to come to Missouri, last week said his office would attempt to iron out labor difficulties at the plant site.

Dewey Neely, president of the Caruthersville Chamber of Commerce, said the community is "very much concerned" about the Noranda labor situation and its effect on attracting industry to the area.

Loss of the Scott plant has caused Caruthersville officials to dust off a $7,000 report made in 1965 on the area's potential for new industry.

Neely said the chamber is in the process of sending out letters to prospective industries.

"It's our own fault if we didn't follow up before," Neely said. "We just can't keep on losing people. Pretty soon there will just be empty stores here."

But Neely and others in the Bootheel are perplexed in trying to iron out construction labor problems.

"What we can do about it, I don't know," Neely said. "But we're going to try."

WOMEN'S LIB, CAMBODIAN STYLE, meant a ride on a tank for this lady soldier during battles with Communists for control of the roads out of Phnom Penh.

Illmo Man Dies In Battle

ILLMO--An Army career man of Illmo died Thursday in South Vietnam of wounds received in battle Jan. 26 and a Scott City soldier is hospitalized in Okinawa after being injured in the Vietnam conflict.

Staff Sgt. Larry Hunter Marshall, 33 years old, whose wife Mrs. Linda Marshall and their five children in Illmo, had been in serious condition since struck in the head by a missile on the January date.

He was due to return to the United States on Feb. 28, his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Palmer of Scott City, said.

The hospitalized soldier, Pfc. Terry D. Wadlington, 20 son of Mr. and Mrs.Fred Wadlington of Scott City, was injured Jan. 18 when hit by a bullet which passed through his right leg, fracturing the bone.

He telephoned his parents Monday night to report his physician is satisfied with his progress although he must undergo surgery before the leg is put in a cast. He said he is now in traction and expects to be returned to a hospital in the United States in three weeks, his mother said.

The fatal wound was the second one recently in battle by Sergeant Marshall last month. On Jan. 7, he suffered a minor injury to his arm and was able to return to duty.

Mrs. Palmer said his wife received a letter dated Jan. 25 in which he told of expecting to return to this country the last of February.

His wife and his parents, Mr. and Mrs, Ike Marshall, of St. Louis were first notified of his latest injury by telegram from the Department of Defense on Jan. 27. They have received four more telegrams on his condition since that time, Mrs. Palmer said.

Marshall was born in Blodgett and attended the Illmo Scott City high school, He enterend the Army when he was 17, He served six months in South Vietnam before his last tour of duty expired in November, 1969. After remaining a civilian here for a few months, he reenlisted early in 1970 and was in Korea for a time. He went back to Vietnam last April.

The body will be brought to Illmo for services.

Pfc. Wadlington was injured when his infantry patrol was ambushed, his mother said.

He graduated from Illmo Scott City high school in the spring of 1969 and worked for Central Foods, Inc. at Cape Girardeau before entering the Army March 3, 1970.

He took his basic training at Ft. Leonard Wood and then went to Fort Ord, Calif. He was home on leave last August before going to South Vietnam where he was serving in the Chu Lai area when injured. In December , he received the Infantry Rifleman's Badge for active ground duty.

The Indian state of Orissa is a bit larger than Florida, but has three times the population density 332 people per square mile.

Cold February Is in Prospect

PORTAGEVILLE — Weather patterns expected through February will result in below normal temperature average and near normal precipitation total over the Missouri Bootheel.

The flow of cold air entering the Nation from the north will be concentrated over the region from the Mississippi Valley eastward. Precipitation reaching the Bootheel will accompany cold fronts at times. More extensive rain patterns forming on fronts in the Gulf Region may occasionally spread far enough northward to reach Southeast Missouri. These present the greatest potential for snow or freezing rain, since cold air will have pushed the front southward and overlay the region on which overruning precipitation will fall.

The daily forecast and extended outlook will continue to be the best guidance tools for anticipating such developments. Travellers should be especially wary about embarking on trips without checking weather reports along your route. Clear skies over Southeast Missouri do not guarantee open roads to your destination.

Just as in January, the temperature trends are likely to include alternating warm and cold spells. Ice forming on potential skating ponds should be tested thoroughly before permitting children to venture forth. At the same time, livestock producers may be faced with the need to break the ice cover over unheated water sources. A regular check of weather forecasts will help you anticipate the need to provide shelter and warmth for newborn animals.

A number of farmers have already taken advantage of the freezing weather that firmed up soils sufficiently for top dressing wheat. Those who have not can expect to find several periods of favorable conditions this month.

Winds have been the most effective weather factor to help reduce excessive moisture from Bootheel soils during January. Brisk breezes coupled with the frequent flow of cold and dry air over the area dried out top layers in some areas so that dust was rising behind equipment putting out nitrogen early in february. The drier the soil, the less freezing is required to firm it up for traffic. Farmers who get the job done as early as possible will avoid any complications from additional rains or snows in the next few weeks.

Peach growers will be looking to put on dormant sprays sometime during this period. Again, forecasts and extended outlooks will help pinpoint those days which are calm enough for spray applications, and following which the temperature will remain above freezing for 24 to 48 hours.

January precipitation was generally below normal, judging from reports from Agricultural Reporting Stations maintained by the National Weather Service. Tehe outstanding exception noted to date was Poplar Bluff where 4.72 inches collected. Sikeston measured 3.77 inches, Malden 2.61, and Portageville 2.15 inches.

Normal precipitation during February for the bootheel as a whole is 3.71 inches. Normals for individual cities:

Cape Girardeau 3.19 inches, Dexter 3.84 inches, Fisk 3.54 inches, New Madrid 4.24 inches, Poplar Bluff 3.45 inches, Caruthersville 4.08 inches, Doniphan 3.61 inches, Morehouse 3.55 inches, Parma 3.98 inches and Sikeston 3.86 inches.

Short term averages for other points:

Advance 3.12 inches, Bloomfield 3.94 inches, Clearwater Dam 3.39 inches, Kennett 4.66 inches, Portageville 4.17 inches, Qulin 3.44 inches, Malden 3.91 inches, Puxico 3.48 inches, Bernie 3.78 inches, Charleston 3.37 inches, Deering 4.50 inches, Malden 3.91 inches and Wappapello Dam 3.35 inches.

LARRY DIXON is with Marguerite Piazza 1971 National American Cancer Society education and fund - raising crusade chairman. Marguerite Piazza, star of opera, concert, night club and television will salute Missouri crusaders in a personal appearance in St. Louis March 9.

Dixon Named Chairman of Cancer Crusade

JEFFERSON CITY — Dr. Neill Berry, president of the Missouri division of the American Cancer Society announces that Larry Dixon of Springfield will serve as 1971 Missouri April Crusade chairman.

Dixon served in that capacity in 1970. "Under his leadership the division sustained a record 13.7 percent increase over 1969 and set a new all-time record of $1,084,437," Dr. Berry noted.

"'We want to wipe out cancer in your lifetime' is our 1971 motto," Berry said.

POPULAR TANGERINE

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) The San Diego County Farm Bureau says tangerines, sometimes called the "zippered" fruit because of a peeling that almost unzips itself, are more plentiful than ever.

Believed to be a native of China, the tangerine first reached this country in the 19th century when the Italian consul at New Orleans planted tangerine trees on the consulate grounds.

The bureau says the tangerine is low in calories and rich in vitamin A. A Gourmet Magazine describes it as "an orange with a sense of fair play ... it neither oozes, squashes or squirts at us."

Florida Loses Ardor for Limited -Income Retirees

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — State officials, hard pressed to keep up with citizen service demands, have taken themselves out of the business of encouraging retirees of limited income to move to Florida.

"Florida no longer desires to be known as the fastest growing state in the union," state Senate president Jerry Thomas said Monday.

"We have our hands full taking care of over 6.8 million permanent residents without encouraging more."

Florida leaped to ninth in population in 1970 from 10th in 1960, with a gain of 1.9 million residents. State leaders project a 35 per cent increase to 9 million by 1980.

Thomas appealed to the state Senate Ways and Means Committee to block any 1971-72 fiscal year budget request which would be used to encourage people to move into the state permanently.

He also urged the committee to see that appropriations for industrial development spell out that only "environmentally clean" industry is being sought.

"Many of our senior citizens who have come to Florida to retire are learning that it is not quite the inexpensive state as some promoters led them to believe," Thomas declared.

Two weeks ago, L. K. Ireland, Gov. Reubin Askew's top budget officer, questioned the need for the $5.2 million the state Division of Commercial Development planned to spend in 1971-72.

Roy Thompson Jr., division director, said he now spends only about $3,000 out of a $5 million budget on promotional material for retirees and that this small sum is solely for pamphlets sent on request.

"We're not actively encouraging them to come, but we're not putting up the barriers on the Georgia line, either," he said.

The main promotional dollar now is concentrated on bringing the bigger spender to Florida, the man who makes $15,000 a year or more, he said.

"The man making that kind of money has shown a tendency to go other places. We're getting pretty stiff competition from California, Hawaii, Europe and the Islands," Thompson added.

"The Islands" are the Bahamas and the Caribbean islands.

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — The University of Denver played an intrasquad game and Dave (Stretch) Bustion, a 6-8 transfer from Northeastern, Colo., Junior College, scored 32 points.

Rural Home Damaged By Smoke

PORTAGEVILLE——The home of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Noffel, east of Portageville on River Road was seriously damaged by heavy smoke Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Noffel were in the kitchen preparing a snack before retiring for the evening when the door bell at the back of the house sounded.

Believing someone was at the back door, Mrs. Noffel went to answer. When she opened the utility it was found full of smoke. Apparently the alarm was shorted out by the fire which has not gained much headway, the alarm had also burned the wires connected to the telephone. Mr. Noffel rushed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Ray next door where the fire department was summoned, which arrived promptly. There was very little fire damage Noffel said, but the entire area of the home will have to be done over because of the smoke.

Noffel said, "we were lucky the door alarm sounded in time to prevent our home from possibly being a complete loss."

Noffel also related Portageville has one of the very best Fire Departments to be found anywhere. The local fireman cannot be praised too highly. Thanks men for a job well done.

Under Twenty

By ASTRID CARSON

Dear Astrid: I enjoy reading your column very much. However, I cannot help but slightly disagree with you now and then. In your response to LISA, you advise her to allow her ex-boy friend to "prove himself" after he had already been caught cheating on her. Anyone who cheats on his or her steady is verly likely to do it again. The aspect of love (or fondness) should be set aside. If a guy has any feeling at all for his girl, he would never cheat on her. Perhaps I sound like a prejudiced girl, but I am of the male gender. Hang in there, Astrid, you are doing a very commendable job. --Helpful

Dear Helpful: Thanks. You're probably right when you say that the boy who cheats once is like to do it again. The key word is "likely" Lisa like any other girl, has to decide for herself whether or not he deserves another chance. If she decides he does, she should be very sure he understands that she is no patsy and that he has to show her he can play it straight. We all make mistakes, and if nobody got a second chance, we'd all be losers.

Dear Astrid: My boy friend is 18, and has gone into the Navy. I'm 17 and am serious about him. My folks don't think I should sit home and wait for him to come home on leave. They tell me I'm too young to sit and wait, yet I don't care to get to know anyone else. He calls me and I pay the phone bill. I have a part-time job and it's my money. It's true my father helped make a down payment on my car and I'm making the payments on it now. My mother and I have had arguments about a lot of things. I'm still in school and can't date during the week. She worries about my safety too much. I'm a big girl and I know what I'm doing. I have plenty of nice clothes and don't want for too much.

Yet my mother and I don't get along, and we fight mostly over my cluttered room and the car. She threatens to ground me if I don't tell her where I'm going. I'll be 18 in February and will be of age and I feel then I won't have to tell her where I'm going. My mother smiles and talks to my friends, but I think it is just a front to keep tabs on me. She says she's concerned and only wants the best for me. I wish I was out on my own., and I think when I am, I'll never asks her to my apartment. She'd only want to snoop around, and I don't think Ill miss her all that much. --GeeCee

Dear GeeCee: Whew! You and your mother really have a thing going - a bad thing! Want to know the truth? You are 18 (give or take a week or two) and you've got a mother-daughter relationship that sounds like 13 or 14. It really doesn't much matter whose fault it is, the fact is, it exists, and you aren't responding at all in a mature fashion to a problem. Is it really worth the fight NOT to tell your mother where you are going? What can she find out from your friends that will upset you? Probably nothing. She may be over concerned, over protective, overly inquisitive and obviously, overly bugs you. But, they are little things in the big scheme of things. When you do get your emancipation declaration, you'll be able to do the things you want when you want. In the meantime, the things that upset you aren't really worth getting all that upset about. As for your boy friend, that's really your decision. Your parents can advise you, but they can't make you date or care for others. Between work and friends, you can find enough to do to keep you busy and happy until he comes home if that's what you want. I'm not puttin you down, GeeCee, but I'm sure you can handle your family problems with more maturity.

Stand ready.
Stand proud.

Cape to Intervene In Utilities Merger

CAPE GIRARDEAU——Cape Girardeau will intervene in the proposed stock exchange between Missouri Utilities Co. here and Union Electric Co. of St. Louis, the City Council decided Wednesday night.

A citizen's committee was appointed to study the company's request for an increase in electric rates.

Intervention in the proposed merger of the two companies would be before the Federal Securities Exchange Commission, City Manager W. G. Lawley told the council in recommending the action.

Missouri Utilities' appeal for a 13½ per cent increase in electric rates to its southeast and central Missouri customers is now pending before the Missouri Public Service Commission in Jefferson City. Cape Girardeau's city attorney, Howard C. Wright Jr., has notified the commission the municipality will intervene.

Lawley said the city has until Feb. 22 to intervene in the proposed stock exchange.

The city manager said it is his opinion the merger would act to restrict competition in the utilities field by continuing the operation of a gas utility company by an electric utility company.

The City of Cape Girardeau is presently involved in the Missouri Utilities' natural gas rate increase proposal pending before the Public Service Commission in Jefferson City. The city formally intervened and in December participated in a cross-examination of the parties involved-- the city, the company and PSC staff--held in Jefferson City. Oral arguments on briefs filed since the hearing are scheduled for Feb. 16 before the PSC.

Malden Man Has Appollo 14 Role

COLORADO SPRINGS——The Apollo 14 astronauts will be kept posted on space-object traffic in earth orbit -- information that U. S. Air Force Technical Sergeant Boyce W. Clayton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Talmadge Clayton, 405 N. Kimball St., Malden, Mo. helped provide.

Sergeant Clayton assists in computer-oriented accounting of space objects orbiting the earth, including 456 military and civilian payloads and 1,653 pieces of "junk". Each circles the earth 16 times daily, producing a possible 20,000 crossings of the Apollo 14 earth orbit.

The sergeant, a space tracking and control technician, is assigned to the 1151st Special Activities Squadron at Ent AFB, Colo. He works in the underground Space Defense Center operated by USAF's Aerospace Defense Command for the joint U. S.—Canadian North American Air Defense Command (NORAD).

The center serves as a command post for a world-wide network of electronic and optical sensors that detect and track objects in space.

The sergeant's support of Apollo 14 is an on-going effort. Orbital analysts on the staff of the center, continually determine elements, such as the shape and size of orbits, the angles at which they cross the equator and the rate of changes of any elements.

When computing orbital elements, the staff figures many factors, including variations in the earth's gravitational field, gravitational influences of sun and moon, atmospheric "drag" and solar radiation pressure.

The data furnished to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) preceding and during a space flight. Technicians in the underground center at Ent use computers in a special Computation of Miss Between Orbits (COMBO) support program during an Apollo mission.

NASA uses COMBO finformation to insure that the Apollo capsule is far from collision. Chances of such an accident are rare. The possibility of the astronauts' sighting another satellite are less rare. NASA could direct the Apollo 14 flight crew to seek a sighting of a specific object at an exact location.

Sergeant Clayton has more than 14 years of service.

The sergeant's wife, Barbara, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Reed, 513 N. Kimball St., Malden. He is a 1957 graduate of Malden high school.

That's The Law

Georgie Does Scare Frank

THE CASE OF THE EYE FLUTTERING BANDIT
By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Georgie sashayed very daintily into Frank's liquor store and, in a high soprano voice, announced: "Your money or your life!" Whereupon, Georgie produced a revolver and Frank produced the money.

A short time later, Georgie fell into the hands of the law and was charged with robbery. In court, he-man Frank looked at eye-fluttering Georgie and testified:

"Sure. That's the cream puff that came into my store. But, he didn't scare me for a minute. If I had blown a kiss at him, he would have fallen over."

Whereupon, Georgie's lawyer demanded that the charges against his client be dismissed.

"Under the law," helpointed out,"robbery is the taking of property by force or fear. If Frank wasn't afraid, obviously, there was no robbery."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you dismiss the charges against eye-fluttering Georgie?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that despite Frank's bravado, there was no question that he was scared. For after all, noted the judge, men do not ordinarily give up their hard-earned cash to a stranger who threatens him with a gun except out of fear of bodily harm.

Based upon a 1965 California Supreme Court Decision.

Dear Mr. Blanton:

I would like to express my appreciation and that of the State Highway Department for the excellent editorials which have recently appeared in the Daily Standard concerning the Intercity—Interregional Highway Plan that has been recommended by the State Highway Commission. We in the Department feel that it is a very realistic plan, that it will provide excellent benefits to the users of Missouri's highways, and that the price is reasonable.

We sincerely appreciate your support of this plan, and your continued support of our efforts to provide the best possible highway system for the least cost.

Very truly yours,
W. H. Shaw

Supt. Twitty Says

No 'Aptitude' For Mathematics

Emily Lynne is his only child. She's 22 and a student at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale. About his daughter..."She knows a smattering about a lot of things, reads everything she can get her hands on, and retains it," he said. "Independent? Oh, yes!!"

Miriam, Emily's mother, died in 1967.

Twitty has done graduate work at Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., Columbia University, New York, and a half-dozen military schools. Will he, after retiring from the Sikeston schools, separate himself from an educational environment?

"I would like to work with a small college, teaching teachers," he said. His philosophy about teachers is startling.

He's the answer to a first grader's mother's dream. Given a group of applicants for a teaching position.... "The first things I would look for are personality traits — a genuine liking for kids, the ability to communicate," he said. "Of course, educational background, but that's farther down the list. Enthusiasm. Imaginative thinking. It's contagious. Even other teachers benefit from a bubbly person." And so do parents.

His comments on school issues were poignant.

Of his 20 years in Sikeston:

"We haven't accomplished everything we've set out to do, but we've made great strides," he said. "Of course, they would have taken place even if I hadn't been here, but we're considered one of the best systems in the state. We have good community support, a good physical plant, fine faculty, but we need a kindergarten facility and an additional middle school. Would I do anything differently? Yes, I'd loosen the structure of the program, but I haven't had the nerve to make all the necessary changes...they're too revolutionary!"

His answer to that frequently asked question:

"Today's kids? They're sharper, more demanding and inquiring. Less disciplined, perhaps, but tremendous. I think there's validity in some of their protest, but I believe that we're obliged to change the structure of things, not just evade them. I'd like to have more contact with kids. Teaching them facts is not the most important thing you do. Give them a sense of discrimination and the ability to reason logically."

His personal tastes, pleasures, foods... people?

"I like intelligent, thinking people around me," he said. "I'd like to surround myself with them. I'm not, necessarily, but I'd like that. I cook a little bit, but I'm a beefsteak man, you know."

He likes E.E. Cummins' poetry and contemporary authors such as Vonnegut appeal to him, along with Faulkner and Hemingway.

"You're going to think this is a little funny, but I know that every night I'm going to wake up about 2 a.m., so I just keep a book handy....I read until about 5. I just don't need very much sleep." Strange for someone else, perhaps, but not for Twitty.

"Do you intend to write, later?" I asked.

"Yes, but not the kind of writing you think",,,he smiled. "It'll probably be about the kind of wood carving I do for a hobby."

He was right, of course, but then I just didn't have the nerve to tell him that before meeting him, I had expected Sikeston's retiring school superintendent to be a little old man.....ready for a rocking chair.
